Busy highway's reopening means a return to business as usual, and ...

Bye-bye boulevard blues

By Kate Bell
Idaho Press-Tribune

Barrell racing on Caldwell Boulevard is a thing of the past.

Businesses are celebrating the end of a trying time with sales to bring customers back to the Boulevard.

But store owners won't soon forget what they and their neighbors went through during reconstruction of 3.8 miles of the primary arterial between Nampa and Caldwell.

Business at Valley Farm Equipment was down 38 percent for the first six months of the year, owner Bill Marlatt said.

A lot of that was due to cut phone lines. On three occasions the business was without phones for a day.

Other challenges occurred early in the construction project. For two weeks at a time in December and January, no one could drive in or out of Valley Farm Equipment.

Marlatt said there was not a business along the Boulevard that didn't suffer during the road project. A couple of businesses closed after the project began, he said, but it's hard to say whether construction was the only factor.

"It's amazing that more businesses didn't go under," he said.

Now that the construction is over, Marlatt is optimistic.

"It's such a great road now that it can only go up from here," he said.

There's no use being negative, he said, noting that business owners can never regain what they've lost.

Feeling the pinch

Harold Schmierer, owner of Bargain Barn, also is optimistic because business is getting better.

"As soon as they took the barricades down I noticed the difference — that day. Every day has been better," Schmierer said. "I can stay in business again."

The Bargain Barn's business started dropping in January, when construction on the widening project began. Every month, Schmierer said, he wondered whether he could hang in there.

Machinery blocked his business for nine days in June. People couldn't see his furniture and appliance store or pull in. He said it cost him thousands of dollars just to stay in business.

Schmierer didn't have a single sale during one week in June and one week in July.

Solutions for survival

Getting to August wasn't easy for Bruce Valdez, either.

If you go

A ribbon-cutting ceremony and several days of sales will help celebrate the newly reconstructed Caldwell Boulevard.

Gov. Phil Batt will dedicate the completed roadway at 10 a.m. Tuesday at Bob's RV Center, 3318 Caldwell Boulevard.

Nampa Mayor Winston Goering, Caldwell Mayor Richard Winder and Idaho Transportation Board Chairman Charles Winder will speak about the project. Refreshments will be served.

Twenty-four businesses will hold special sales and drawings Tuesday through Saturday as part of Back to the Boulevard celebrations. Two $1,000 gift certificates will be given away during the promotion.

"I think that there will be a real boom out here," Back to the Boulevard Chairman Bill Marlatt said.

He hopes Back to the Boulevard will turn into an annual event that will rival downtown Nampa's Good Old Days. He also projects there will be no empty lots on the boulevard within five or six years.

Community remembers victim as family man

Authorities say investigation into tragic train-truck accident will take up to four days

By Chereen Myers
Idaho Press-Tribune

KUNA — Neighbors and friends will miss Joseph Urquidí's enthusiastic commitment to his church and community.

But 39-year-old Urquidí's strong love and devotion for his family will be missed most of all.

"Here's where the tragedy comes in. This is a man who loves his children and spent every waking hour with them," neighbor Alta Graham said. "He had a knack for making them feel important."

Urquidí was killed Friday when his Idaho Power vehicle was struck by an oncoming freight train. Police are not sure why Urquidí was unable to move out of the train's path and the investigation is continuing.

The Idaho Power mechanic was at the Cloverdale Road railroad crossing near Kuna-Mora Road when the accident occurred at 11:30 a.m. Friday.

The investigation, which could reveal why Urquidí couldn't leave the railroad crossing, is expected to last up to four days.

The Urquidí home in Kuna was flooded with supporters of the family after the accident. Friends from St. Joseph's Catholic church in Melba said neighbors were bringing meals to the family and stopping at the house to convey their sympathy.

Cherished times

Patly Herman of Melba worked with Urquidí on a pastoral council group. The committee members would meet each month to plan various church events, such as fund-raising dinners or social activities. St. Joseph's is a mission church for St. Paul's Catholic Church in Nampa. Joe's wife, Gina, also works at St. Paul's.

Please see Family, Page 4A

Services

Vigil services for Joe Urquidí will be held at 7 p.m. Monday at St. Paul's Catholic Church in Nampa, 1515 8th St. S.

To help

A trust fund is being established through the Idaho Power Credit Union for the Urquidí girls: 8-year-old Itxaso, 6-year-old Olaia and 3-year-old Isana. For more information call 466-7031.

Brown UPS trucks may not roll after midnight tonight

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Teamsters, saying negotiations had yielded little progress, set a new strike deadline of midnight tonight as union negotiators prepared to send revised demands to United Parcel Service.

"The brown trucks won't be rolling unless this company agrees to provide the good jobs that American families need," union President Ron Carey said Saturday.

After 15 hours of intensive talks over two days at the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, frustrated union officials said there really wasn't much bargaining going on.

"I'm disappointed by the lack of progress," Carey said after he asked for a recess to discuss the situation with his bargaining committee Friday night.

John Wells, the federal mediator, said late Saturday that he was continuing telephone contact with both the union and company, but gave no indication the two sides were ready to resume direct talks.

A UPS spokeswoman, Gina Ellrich, called the union's decision to set a strike deadline "very unfortunate" and said "we're eager to continue talking with the union."

Latest Washington scandal — White House ticket scalping

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Becky Waller said she'd be willing to pay rather than disappoint two Spanish exchange students who wanted to see the White House.

But, prompted by complaints from other tourists, authorities are cracking down on scalpers who charge up to $50 for tour passes to the president's home that are supposed to be given to the public for free.

"We just want to see the White House," said Waller, who arrived in Washington from Norfolk, Va., Saturday too late for tickets. With no scalpers to be found, she and her guests didn't get in.

An estimated 3 percent to 5 percent of the 2,500 to 5,000 free White House tour tickets distributed each morning are snapped up by scalpers who then sell them for $5 to $50 each, according to Phil Walsh, chief National Park Service Ranger for President's Park, which includes the presidential mansion and surrounding parkland.

The problem has gotten steadily worse, Walsh said, since the White House ticket kiosk was moved in the spring of 1995 from a grassy spot between the president's home and the Washington Monument to a new visitor center housed in the Commerce Department building.

Walsh said the U.S. Park Police in the past sent undercover officers by periodically to deal with the scalpers, but this summer complaints were so frequent that uniformed police are on regular patrol.

Idaho

High pressure will have a hold today, promoting sunshine and increasing heat. A couple of thundershowers will be over the mountains, but they will be very spotty in nature. This high will continue to dominate the weather through midweek by blocking any cold front that tries to drop in from the north. Perhaps by Thursday, the high will weaken enough to allow a cold frontal passage.

Disease spreads through upper valley

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Late blight has turned into a headache for the whole Upper Snake River Valley.

Spores carrying the potato fungus have made their way up to Madison and Fremont counties, Bert Moulton of the Potato Growers of Idaho in Blackfoot said Friday.

The good news is that farmers throughout the region seem to be alert to the dangers and are taking the necessary precautions.

"All the spray rigs are going pretty well," Moulton said.

Late blight thrives in wet, humid conditions, which usually are not a concern to eastern Idaho growers in early August. But it is the Upper Snake River Valley's first experience with the disease responsible for the Irish potato famine of the 1840s.

The fungus has been found in the Magic Valley and southwestern Idaho since 1995, but the first eastern Idaho reports were last month near Fort Hall. Since then the fungus has spread to fields west of Idaho Falls and as far north as the Egin Bench near St. Anthony.

"There's nobody out there who isn't going to be affected," Moulton said. "The biggest thing is prevention. If you get it, you can keep it under control. If you do that properly, it becomes an expense issue."

Teens among 8 suspected in rampage

OROFINO (AP) — Three teen-agers are among the eight inmates suspected of causing $20,000 in damages during a rampage at the Idaho Correctional Institution-Orofino.

The state Department of Correction released the names of the inmates Friday as the prison returned to normal.

So far, an investigation indicates Thursday's disturbance was spontaneous rather than planned, Deputy Warden Dean Allen said.

Eight inmates were identified by guards as being responsible for allegedly starting fires, vandalizing appliances and breaking windows during an incident that lasted less than one hour.

The inmates were housed in a close-custody, maximum-security unit, but after the disturbance they were transferred to the Idaho Maximum Security Institution south of Boise.

"We anticipate this case will be prosecuted," Allen said. "We'll await the outcome of the investigation."

Just before the disruption began about noon Thursday, prison employees were preparing to enter the inmates' living quarters and move some of the men to a more secure area for disciplinary reasons, Allen said.

Some inmates received cuts or suffered smoke inhalation during the incident, but no one was seriously injured.

Tribe working on its burning phase-out

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — While some farmers on the Rathdrum Prairie are discussing a voluntary phase-out of bluegrass burning over the next decade, growers on Coeur d'Alene tribal lands are planning their own changes for this season.

The tribe also is studying a 10-year burn phase-out plan, said Francis Sijohn, tribal smoke manager. The field stubble is burned to prompt the grass to grow seed.

Details of the proposal will not be made public until the tribal council reviews it.

In the meantime, improvements will be implemented once burning begins later this summer.

Bluegrass farmers on reservation land will now be in contact with each other by radios. If weather conditions shift, the word will be given "within seconds" to shut down the burning.

The reservation has also been split up into three burning zones, near Worley, Plummer and Tensed.

Varying weather conditions may mean the wind in the first zone could shift smoke toward a populated area, while farmers in the other zones will not be affected.

Greater restrictions will also be placed on burning within a 1.5-mile radius of the three main communities. The tribe has acquired equipment to monitor air and weather.

Questions about nuclear fallout

By The Associated Press

Some questions and answers on the National Cancer Institute report on radiation fallout from nuclear bomb tests in the 1950s.

Q: What caused the radiation and how widespread was it?

A: The government conducted 90 atmospheric nuclear bomb tests over the Nevada desert from 1951-1958, sending radioactive particles across most of the country, including iodine-131. The highest levels of fallout were in the Northwest and Midwest states. Nationwide, 25 counties in five states were exposed to an average of 9 to 16 rads, enough to be called hot spots. Dozens of other counties throughout the Farm Belt and Northwest received above-average fallout as well.

Q: What is iodine-131?

A: It is a radioactive isotope that decays rapidly in the environment. Its radiation is reduced by half every eight days, meaning risk of exposure is limited to about two months. But once ingested, it concentrates in the thyroid and may increase the risk of thyroid cancer, especially in children, over a lifetime.

Q: How were people exposed?

A: The overwhelming pathway was from drinking contaminated milk. I-131 was carried over wide areas as part of the fallout, and fell on pastures either as a solid or in rain where it was eaten by cows, contaminating their milk. Smaller amounts contaminated other dairy products and leafy vegetables.

Q: What were the levels of exposure?

A: While the average cumulative exposure for all 190 million people in the country at that time was estimated at 2 rads, exposure in some counties was as much as 16 rads for all age groups. But for children, it was sometimes as much as seven times the average for a county, or up to 115 rads. A rad, or "radiation absorbed dose," is the amount of radiation energy absorbed by body tissues. Two rads is about five times the radiation delivered by a modern mammogram. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission requires protective action when accumulative doses to thyroids in adults is expected to reach 15 rads.

Q: Why were children most at risk from 1950s fallout?

A: Children generally drink more milk than adults and they have a smaller thyroid, so more I-131 would concentrate in a small amount of tissue.

Q: If exposed to I-131, what is the risk of getting thyroid cancer?

A: The risk of thyroid cancer from childhood exposure to external radiation has been clear for many years. But health experts are unsure about the risk of thyroid cancer from I-131. Increased cases of thyroid cancer have been found among children exposed to high levels of I-131 from the Chernobyl nuclear accident. Researchers hope data from Chernobyl will clarify the cancer risks posed by I-131.

Q: What should someone do if they are worried about fallout exposure?

A: Ask for a thyroid examination at the next scheduled doctor's visit.

Game managers say tinkering could foil plan

By The Associated Press

BOISE — The architects of a new elk management system say they are worried the Idaho Fish and Game Commission is tinkering with it before its value has been proven.

At the July 17 meeting, the commission softened the plan because of fears it offered too much to archers at the expense of rifle hunters.

"There is a fairness issue here," said Commissioner Jeff Siddoway of Terreton said. "We have a fairness gap."

The plan calls for the state to be divided into 29 zones, starting in 1998. Hunters would have to pick a zone to hunt in each area, sportsmen must choose between an A-tag or B-tag. The tags were to be implemented statewide.

The A-tags would allow hunting during a long archery season or a short, general rifle season for spike bulls only. In some areas, the A-tag would also allow hunters to chase cows for a short time.

The B-tag would let hunters take any bulls during a short rifle season. The B-tags would be capped in areas where there is concern about mature bull populations.

While most parts of the plan remained the same, the commissioners decided statewide implementation of spikes-only general hunts was too drastic and could run some high-quality controlled hunts.

Instead, they ruled game managers in each region could choose when and where to allow spikes-only hunting. In areas where the managers do not want a spikes-only hunt, the A-tag would essentially be an archery season. In those cases, the only rifle hunting would be during the B-tag season.

"They reduced the value of an A-tag," said Lamm Kack, state big game manager. "And they put more pressure on B-tags."

Family finds body in Nampa waterway

By Chereen Myers
Idaho Press-Tribune

NAMPA — Police have few leads on a body discovered in Phyllis Canal on Saturday afternoon.

A family driving down 2nd Street South at about 11:30 a.m. Saturday discovered the body of an adult male floating in the canal near Fred Meyer and called the Nampa Police Department.

Nampa Police Sgt. Kyle Winnicki said there are few clues about the identity of the man. Police estimate that the man has been dead for about a week.

"We are not aware of anyone missing right now," Winnicki said.

Because the body was in the water for several days, Winnicki said it is very difficult to learn anything about how he died, his age or ethnic background. Police are estimated that the man is in his 30s.

Police say there were no obvious signs of foul play.

The man was wearing dark-colored pants and a light-colored, possibly white, tank top. Winnicki said the clothes were extremely muddy, and it was difficult to form an exact description of what he was wearing.

An autopsy will be conducted today, and the Nampa Police Department and the Canyon County Coroner's Office have launched an investigation to determine the man's identity and cause of death.

Anyone who might have information about the man is asked to call the Nampa Police Department, 465-2257.

Family: Idaho Power worker was active in Basque community

Herman said the group had decided to meet on Tuesdays rather than Thursdays, because Urquidi was on call at Idaho Power on Thursdays and wanted to attend the meetings. The group had planned to meet Tuesday.

"It's just a hard for me to think that Joe would be at our next meeting," Herman said.

Dave Nichols also served on the pastoral council with Urquidi. When church dinners were planned, Joe and Gina Urquidi often cooked for the gatherings.

The Urquidi family cooked a Basque dinner for the church, and helped prepare corned beef and cabbage for a St. Patrick's Day dinner. When the busy holiday schedule hindered plans to decorate the church in 1996, Urquidi took time out to set up the Christmas tree.

"I remember the leadership he gave us, and how he could draw ideas and thoughts from people that they did not know they had," Nichols said.

A best friend and devoted father

Dave Reynolds of Kuna said his 2-year-old daughter would run to sit with Urquidi, who was her godfather, at church.

But Reynolds said Urquidi's top priority was his wife and children.

"The family was pretty much first," Reynolds said. "He sacrificed everything for his family."

Reynolds said he remembered Urquidi taking his daughters on fishing trips and that he purchased sheep and a horse for his girls.

Urquidi's love for his family seemed to take precedence over everything else. His friends said Urquidi enjoyed spending time with his three daughters, 8-year-old Itxaso, 6-year-old Olaia and 3-year-old Isana. Today is Itxaso's eighth birthday.

"He was a true father and a family man," Herman said. "I think he was Gina's best friend. He was just a neat dad."

In addition to his interest in church and a love for the outdoors, Urquidi liked to participate in area Basque events. The Urquidi family has been actively involved in the Basque community leading a youth group at Boise's Basque center, and Gina Urquidi is a Basque dance instructor.

"He was very family and heritage oriented and was bringing up his family to be very proud of their Basque and Catholic heritage," Nichols said.

Unfinished plans

Although Urquidi had worked as a mechanic at Idaho Power for about seven years, he was excited about a future change in his career. He was training to become a lineman for Idaho Power and looked forward to spending more time outdoors in his new job.

He also produced a steady stream of ideas at church. Graham said he talked about working harder to promote activities for young people, and Urquidi told the pastoral council he wanted to organize an ice cream social in August.

"I am going to miss having Joe to work with," Nichols said. "We had a lot of unfinished plans, and I hope we are up to getting them done without him. But I'm sure if we look hard enough Joe will be there to help us."

Boulevard: It's back to basics for inconvenienced businesses

Valdez, owner of the three-year-old Local Computer Source, describes the road construction as a life-changing event.

"In my lifetime, this has been one of the biggest trials," he said.

Before construction began, the store had four full-time employees. Valdez eventually had to let all of them go. All he could do was give them good recommendations.

Valdez had to work odd jobs and take out a small loan to get by. Working that hard caused health problems.

But most of his problems were caused by construction equipment.

His family experienced a sleep loss during the road project. Valdez believes his dog was injured or killed by machinery and buried under the road as it was being built.

In front of his business drove customers away, he said.

If a loyal customer happened to drive by when equipment was in the way, then Valdez missed them. Some clients told him they didn't want to drive through the construction zone. Other long-time customers said they'd wait until after the Boulevard was finished to upgrade their computers.

So Valdez started taking his business to his customers. But he said, business was down 67 percent even after he implemented his plan of driving out to clients.

He started a side venture putting business Web pages in a 24-Hour Plaza on the Internet.

Now he plans to have his store back on solid footing by Christmas.

"From here on out it's nothing but growth," Valdez said. But he will never forget where he started and how he barely made it, he said.

Neither will other business owners.

Walizer said business owners got to know one another during the road project.

"This has brought the community, business-wise, a lot closer," he said. "When I drive down the Boulevard, I don't see businesses. I see the people behind those businesses and what they went through."

Business big and small

Small businesses such as Schmierer and Valdez's suffered. But sales declined even at larger businesses.

Cam at Happy Day Ford had to be washed every day instead of once a week during the dusty road project. General Manager Butch Freeman said.

Boulevard resident Gary Vezzoso formed CRASH — Citizens Requesting a Safe Highway — lobbied for 10 years for an improved road.

The dealership had only one driveway for six weeks, and construction equipment parked in front of it part of the time. Sweeney said Happy Day Ford was the parking lot for the nearby employment office for a while.

The company's sales declined as fewer and fewer customers drove onto the lot.

Like Valdez, employees at Happy Day Ford soon realized they needed to go to the customer.

Salesmen took vehicles to prospective buyers' homes, and the service department picked up and delivered vehicles needing repairs. Personnel Director Tracie Sweeney said.

Now that the construction project is over, Freeman said, business has returned to 50 percent of normal traffic and its getting better every day.

CRASH's 10-year wait

But effort and sacrifice to make improvements to the Boulevard didn't start this past December. It started nearly 10 years ago with Boulevard resident Gary Vezzoso.

Vezzoso formed Citizens Requesting a Safe Highway in September 1987 in reaction to a head-on collision in which two women were killed. Between 1983 and 1987 there were 12 deaths on the Boulevard between Karcher Road and Caldwell's 10th Avenue.

"Somebody had to do something and nobody would," Vezzoso said.

Organizers wanted lower speed limits along the Boulevard. The group envisioned a five-lane road that would include a middle turn lane, curbs and gutters, and more traffic signals.

Some people told Vezzoso it would never happen.

"It was only through all of the support we got from the media that really made it possible," he said.

Plans had been unveiled eight years earlier for an improved Boulevard. But Nampa and Caldwell lost the opportunity to use those plans when they opted to spend federal funds on other projects. Caldwell chose to widen and improve state Highway 19 running west to the J.R. Simplot processing plant. Nampa used its funds for projects on Midland Boulevard and 16th Avenue.

CRASH was tired of waiting.

In October 1987, 300 residents packed into a Caldwell City Council meeting to show support for a resolution to make the Boulevard safer.

Later that month 500 Canyon County residents marched along the skidmark-filled highway, waving CRASH signs and chanting slogans to send a message to the state Department of Transportation.

A stoplight was installed at the Boulevard's Linden intersection in July 1988.

Within a year and a half of CRASH's debut, the Boulevard was put on the Idaho Transportation Board's 6-year highway construction plan. The project was scheduled for 1992.

The next milestone was the Ustick stoplight in February 1991.

"We had about 40 key supporters that volunteered incredible time and effort," Vezzoso said.

The group's bumper stickers still can be seen on cars around town. The stickers read, "Pray for me! I drive the Nampa-Caldwell Blvd!"

Maybe residents will peel them off now.

Marjorie Wesche

Marjorie Mildred MacKellar Wesche was born in Watervliet, Michigan, September 23, 1915, to William and Ethel MacKellar. She was the seventh of nine children, having six brothers and two sisters. She was reared on a small farm near Decatur, Michigan, where they raised celery, onions and other truck garden produce.

She started attending a small country school when she was four years of age. During elementary school, she walked two miles to school each day. During high school she walked two and one half miles to town where the high school was located. Her mother and the family attended the Methodist Church in Decatur, Michigan. One of Marjorie's high school teachers was influential in her attending Taylor University which was this teacher's alma mater. It was during the fall of 1933 that she met Percival Wesche who she later dated and eventually married. During college she majored in Education and upon graduation in 1937 accepted a teaching position in New Haven, Michigan, after having sent out two hundred applications. She received the highest salary of any of her classmates who took teaching positions that year, which was twelve hundred dollars for ten months of school.

She and Percival Wesche were married June 25, 1939. She then joined him in pastoral work in the Church of the Nazarene in Lowell, Indiana. Then they moved to pastor a church in Hammond, Indiana. While there they both pursued graduate work at the University of Chicago and at the same time supported the war effort by working in the war plants.

In the fall of 1945 Percival Wesche was called to teach at Olivet Nazarene College in Kankakee, Illinois. Marjorie received a public school teaching position near Kankakee and remained teaching in public school there until the fall of 1950 when she accepted a teaching position at Olivet Nazarene College.

In December of 1950, a daughter, Adell, was born. She was too ill to go home with Percival and Marjorie. A few weeks later a doctor friend indicated there was a baby girl, born the same day as Adell, available for adoption. The baby, Joy Dell, joined the family in April 1951. During the last two years at Olivet, Percival and Marjorie pastored two Methodist churches located a few miles from Kankakee in addition to continuing with teaching.

In June of 1951 Percival and Marjorie left Kankakee to do full-time graduate work at the University of Oklahoma. During that year Percival pastored a Presbyterian church as well as carrying a full graduate load and teaching at the University. On January 5, 1952, a new member of the family joined them, another daughter, Jody Kay.

The next move was to Wilmore, Kentucky, where Percival taught in Asbury Theological Seminary while pursuing research for his doctoral dissertation.

In 1954 the family moved to Nampa where Percival taught at Northwest Nazarene College and Marjorie re-entered public school teaching. She taught in Homedale, Melba and Nampa. During these years she was twice voted as the Outstanding Home Economic Teacher in the state of Idaho. She also obtained a large grant enabling her to initiate a Nutrition Turn On program in which high school students were trained to teach elementary students the values of good nutrition.

After she retired from public school teaching in 1980 she and her husband went to Trinidad where they taught in one of the Nazarene missionary schools.

During retirement years she made many beautiful sewn, handmade gifts.

She is survived by her husband, Percival Wesche of Nampa; a sister, Doris Shaw of Fort Myers, Florida; two daughters, Joy Martinez of Vancouver, Washington, and Jody Wesche of Nampa; five grandchildren, Robert Prior, Sara Prior, Eric Prior and John Martinez of Vancouver, Washington; Kayleigh Wesche and Emmalee Wesche of Nampa; and one great granddaughter, Denae Lee of Vancouver, Washington.

A memorial service will be held Monday, August 4 at 2 p.m. at College Church of the Nazarene, Nampa, Idaho.

The family requests that memorial contributions be sent to the Medical Fund for Emmalee Wesche in care of College Church of the Nazarene in Nampa, Idaho.

missed by all, died Friday, Aug. 1, 1997, in a McCall Care Center of natural causes. Graveside services will be conducted 2 p.m. Tues., Aug. 5, 1997, at the McCall Cemetery with Rev. Ron Clapp, officiating under direction of the Heikkila Funeral Chapel, McCall.

Richard was born May 31, 1935, in Lincoln Co., Nebr. to Carl and Julia Callahan, in a house made of baled hay, the eighth of nine children. He moved with his family to the Parma/Wilder area in 1938, where he lived through high school. Richard married Lois Mardelle Bowers in 1954. He joined the U.S. Air Force in 1955 and after being stationed at bases around the world, he returned to Mt. Home for the final yrs. of his eight yrs. in the service. They moved to McCall living here for five yrs before returning to Boise Junior College to earn a BA degree in social work in 1973. He worked for the State of Idaho Vocational Rehabilitation several yrs. before retiring to his home in McCall to pursue his love of wood working, fishing, camping and especially hunting. In our memories he will be forever grinning from ear to ear up at hunting camp.

Air Force lied to hide its planes, study says

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With growing hysteria over alleged UFO sightings in the 1950s, the Air Force repeatedly concocted false cover stories to hide the fact that their super-secret spy planes had been spotted, an intelligence study says.

Historian Gerald K. Haines writes that the Air Force, responding to alleged UFO sightings during the Cold War years, frequently provided explanations that were untrue to deflect attention away from the spy planes.

"Over half of all UFO reports from the late 1950s through the 1960s were accounted for by manned reconnaissance flights (namely the U-2) over the United States," Haines wrote in the spring issue of Studies of Intelligence, an unclassified CIA journal.

The article was found Saturday on the Internet.

Concern about the public finding out about the secret spy planes "led the Air Force to make misleading and deceptive statements to the public in order to allay public fears and to protect an extraordinarily sensitive national security project," Haines wrote.

"While perhaps justified, this deception added fuel to the later conspiracy theories and the coverup controversy," regarding the existence of UFOs, he added.

Haines, a historian at the National Reconnaissance Office, based his article on a review of CIA documents from the late 1940s to 1990.

He described how the Air Force sought to deflect attention from the development of its high-altitude experimental aircraft, the U-2 and the SR-71.

Man spots his stolen car behind him on highway

ALAMO, Calif. (AP) — There was something strangely familiar about the Suburban in Alan Ecker's rearview mirror.

It looked just like one stolen from his driveway two days before. Convinced it was his, Ecker used a cellular telephone to call police from the car he was riding in while keeping the suspicious sports utility vehicle in sight.

"It's very unusual that the victim sees his stolen car tooling down the road," said California Highway Patrol officer Cliff Kroeger.

CHP officers caught up with the Suburban and arrested the driver.

Bomb threat forces plane evacuation

DALLAS (AP) — Passengers aboard a Delta Air Lines jet were detained for more than an hour Saturday after a note containing a bomb threat was found on board.

Four people received minor injuries during the emergency evacuation of the Delta MD-90 on a remote runway, Delta spokesman Kip Smith said.

Flight 858 from Phoenix was about to land at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport when a passenger found a note in a magazine at 12:07 p.m., said Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Roland Herwig said.

Dana Keeton, one of 124 passengers aboard, described the scare she and her fellow travelers experienced.

"There was a five-page note in a magazine," Keeton said. "And it started off with 'You're going to die on this flight.'"

The plane landed and was taken to a remote part of the airport, where passengers slid down emergency slides and were taken away by shuttle bus. Airport security officers aided by dogs searched the plane and baggage but no bomb was found.

Officials drop foam on large tire fire

GILA RIVER INDIAN COMMUNITY, AZ. (AP) — Firefighters began dumping chemical foam Saturday to try and smother a huge tire fire as federal investigators looked into suspicions of arson.

The 150 people evacuated Friday remained out of their homes. Agents from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms were called in to help investigate.

Authorities hoped to arrange for an emergency shipment of retardant from Atlanta, and to truck in 270,000 gallons of water, said Carole Jackson, a spokeswoman for the Gila River Indian Community.

To smother the fire, planes have to drop water to cool it down, follow with a load of foam, and then another dousing of water, said Maricopa County spokesman Scott Celley.

The fire in this community 70 miles southeast of Phoenix began Friday and consumed 16 mounds of shredded tires. Three million shredded tires were being stored for recycling.

Caretaker to get $10,000 reward

MIAMI (AP) — The FBI will reward houseboat caretaker Fernando Carreira with $10,000 for his role in leading police to alleged spree killer Andrew Cunanan.

Miami Beach police have not decided whether to award Carreira a $45,000 reward, they offered for information.

New York City also offered $10,000 for tips leading authorities to Cunanan. Mayor Rudolph Giuliani has said Carreira found Cunanan by mistake and didn't meet the exact criteria.

Carreira happened on the suspect as he went to check on a boat where Cunanan was hiding about a week after the slaying of fashion designer Gianni Versace.

When police searched the boat they found Cunanan, who had killed himself.

Carreira, 71, was eligible for the reward, Coleen Rowley, an FBI spokeswoman in Minneapolis, said Friday.

The money is in addition to $10,000 given to Carreira last week by a New York-based gay and lesbian anti-violence group. Three of five men Cunanan was suspected of killing were gay.

Attorneys will consider assisted suicide proposals

American Bar Association debates controversial issue at annual convention

By The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — People are ambivalent about doctor-assisted suicide, says Washington lawyer John Pickering, who offers himself as an example. He opposes making it a legal right but has other views about what he may do in private.

"I reserve the right to do in private what my family, my pastor, my physician and I decide is best," Pickering said Saturday as he led a debate on the emotional topic at the American Bar Association's annual convention.

ABA delegates will be asked this week to consider competing policy proposals — one encouraging states to allow doctor-assisted suicide with certain safeguards and another urging states not to legalize the practice pending further study on how to make sure it is not misused.

In June, the Supreme Court ruled there is no constitutional right to assisted suicide for the terminally ill. However, states still could legalize the practice, and the high court left room for doctors to give patients potent drugs for their pain, even if the drugs may hasten death.

Doctor-assisted suicide already is an option for many people, said Daniel McIntosh of the Beverly Hills Bar Association, which introduced the proposal that supports legalizing the practice.

"Many people among the elite believe that they'll be able to provide for themselves if they need to," McIntosh said. Also, he said, "over half of the doctors who treat AIDS in San Francisco have already helped a patient die."

Lawyer Kathryn Tucker of Seattle said that in the current "underground system" there are no safeguards to make sure patients seeking suicide are terminally ill, mentally competent and have considered other options. Tucker argued unsuccessfully before the Supreme Court for a right to assisted suicide.

But Pickering, who chairs the ABA's Senior Lawyers Division, said legalizing the practice would be "dangerous public policy."

"It puts at risk the most vulnerable segments of our society: the poor, the elderly, persons with disabilities," Pickering said. "What may be voluntary in Beverly Hills is hardly voluntary in Watts," the poor section of Los Angeles.

Things could get nasty in Congress

Lawmakers have month to soak up recent success

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — September could be a tense month for the Senate.

The bipartisan bonhomie over the budget and tax bills will be long gone when lawmakers return from the August recess, and Majority Leader Trent Lott's full legislative calendar could be stopped in its tracks.

Furious over the continuing Republican investigation of Sen. Mary Landrieu's election, Democrats have threatened to shut down all floor action except for votes on appropriations bills.

And Sens. John McCain, R-Ariz., and Russell Feingold, D-Wis., bipartisan sponsors of campaign finance legislation, have threatened to continually attach their measure to other bills unless they get an up-or-down vote on it as a free-standing measure.

Senate Majority Leader Thomas Daschle, D-S.D., sees the efforts as complementary.

"I would think that nothing could slow things down more than to attach a campaign finance bill to every other piece of legislation that comes along," he told reporters. "We've got the potential for some interesting weeks as soon as we get back."

Lott, meanwhile, is planning a full schedule. "When we come back in September, we have a lot of important work to do," said the Mississippi Republican.

On the list: appropriations bills; Food and Drug Administration reform; adoption reform; Antitank reform; trade legislation; product liability reform; a major highway bill; a religious persecution bill; a juvenile crime bill; and labor legislation.

A similar situation looms in the House, where Democrats want the Republican-run House Administration Committee to conclude its investigation of Democratic Rep. Loretta Sanchez' close election win over Republican Robert Dornan.

Senate Democrats promised two weeks ago to block all floor action when Congress reconvenes — excluding appropriations bills — if Republicans did not end their probe of Democrat Landrieu's challenged Louisiana election by last Thursday. They also said they would use Senate rules even to object to meetings of committees.

The Democrats boycotted the bipartisan investigation in late June, contending there was no evidence supporting Republican Woody Jenkins' claim that widespread fraud cost him last November's race. He lost by 5,788 votes out of 1.8 million cast.

Although Democrats have a month to cool off, their tempers flared when Republicans re-energized the investigation, this time voting to go ahead on their own, just before Congress recessed for the rest of the summer.

Sen. Connie Mack, R-Fla., said that trying to hamstring the Senate could backfire on Democrats. "Both sides can play that game. They want judges. They want appointments."

Lott, meanwhile, seemed unperturbed by threats that McCain and Feingold would try to attach their campaign finance measure — supported by President Clinton — to other bills if Lott will not permit a straight up-or-down vote in September.

New security camera got shooting on video

By The Associated Press

LEESVILLE, La. — A Wal-Mart security camera was rolling when a man knocked his estranged wife to the ground in the store's parking lot, stood over her, and shot her four times, police said.

Angela Knox was pronounced dead at 5 a.m. Friday, shortly after the shooting.

"It appears this guy was stalking his wife and then he executed her," Police Chief Betty D. Hickman said.

Anthony A. Knox, 34, of Leesville, was booked on second-degree murder charges.

Two days earlier, Knox had been served with court papers telling him that Mrs. Knox, 32, had asked for a divorce and a restraining order against him, Hickman said.

Knox followed his wife to the store, which is open 24 hours a day, and sat in the parking lot waiting for her to return to her car, he said.

Witnesses told police Mrs. Knox was putting bags in the car when Knox approached her from behind.

Wal-Mart installed four video surveillance cameras last week at the Leesville store, and one of those cameras taped the attack and shooting.

Clinton lifts ban on weapons sales to Latin America

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — High-tech U.S. arms sales to Latin American can resume on a case-by-case basis now that President Clinton has lifted a 20-year-old ban.

White House press secretary Mike McCurry described the president's move Friday as putting U.S. policy in Latin America on par with that toward other regions.

It "will be implemented in a way that serves our objective of promoting stability, restraint and cooperation in the region," McCurry said.

The announcement apparently gives the go-ahead to Chile, which is considering buying as many as two dozen American F-16 fighter planes to replace its own aging squadron.

"In light of the fact that the hemisphere is now almost exclusively democratic, it makes sense not to have what amounts to a unilateral U.S. embargo," said Jim Dobbins, the National Security Council's top Latin American expert.

But Rep. Nita Lowey, D-N.Y.,

who introduced a bill this week to make the ban permanent, accused Clinton of bowing to the financial interests of defense contractors seeking to expand their markets.

"This administration must not allow McDonnell Douglas and Lockheed Martin to dictate our foreign policy," she said.

The Chilean purchase would be the first to be considered — and "considered favorably" — by an interagency committee set up under the new policy, Dobbins said. But Peru and Ecuador, which are engaged in a border dispute, were not expected to win approval for arms they have sought.

In the late 1970s, when most of the continent was ruled by military dictatorships, the United States instituted its policy of "presumed denial" on high-technology arms sales to Latin America.

Also Friday, the United States and Colombia signed an agreement that will permit continued U.S. counternarcotics assistance to units of the Colombian armed forces judged to be respectful of human rights.

Will America buy Clinton, GOP budget pitch?

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With talk of common bonds and better tomorrows, President Clinton and Republicans hit the airwaves — separately — Saturday to sell the nation on how their balanced-budget and tax bills will fatten the family savings account.

A new poll suggested Americans are skeptical.

"There has been a lot of cheering here in Washington, but there's been cheering on Main Street as well, for the real impact of this budget will be in the lives, the dreams and the futures of families all across America," Clinton said in his week-

He was joined there by three families, including a working mother with two children lacking health insurance, who he said would directly benefit from the legislation to be signed in a splashy White House celebration on Tuesday. The package, designed to balance the federal budget by 2002, includes tax cuts worth $152 billion over the next five years.

Republicans, in their own broadcast, similarly sought to put a human face on the balanced-budget and tax measures hammered out between the Democratic president and the GOP-led Congress.

"It is about the single mother with children in high school, who will now be able to send her kids to college," said Rep. Kenny Hulshof, R-Mo. "It's about looking at your paycheck with the satisfaction of knowing there will be something left at the end of the week."

But a CNN/Time survey found that, while 59 percent of Americans believe the legislation will benefit the country, just one-third expect it to benefit them personally. Only one in 10 believes his or her own taxes will go down. A majority — 52 percent — said it was unlikely that the budget agreement would actually result in a balanced budget.

Despite public doubts, Clinton and his Republican partners patting themselves on the back for working together, even as their separate radio addresses mirrored their separate, celebratory announcements — from opposite ends of Pennsylvania Avenue — when final agreement was reached last week.

"We have come together to conquer one of our most persistent problems," said Clinton. "I hope that's how we'll meet all our challenges in the years to come."

Hulshof, too, suggested that a cooperative spirit could reach beyond the immediate legislation. "We have taken a major step toward restoring America's faith in the democratic process and hope for a better tomorrow," he said.

Still, there was a hint of dissatisfaction at the end of long negotiations that left Republicans with shallower tax cuts than they'd wanted. "No one is claiming this bipartisan agreement is perfect," said Hulshof. "But we must not allow that perfect to be the enemy of the good."

Budget bills had little pain, a lot of goodies

Strong economy made cuts, planning easy to accomplish

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Cutting the deficit is supposed to involve pain and sacrifice. But unless you are a health care provider, smoker or airline passenger, chances are you will be helped more than hurt by this year's budget-balancing effort by President Clinton and Congress.

For now, at least. Clinton plans to sign the spending and tax measures Tuesday after lawmakers shipped the two bills to him last week by lopsided margins.

As they did, what was striking — besides the unusual bipartisanship — was how each side could boast about what they were giving voters, not taking from them.

This meant lots of talk by Republicans about cutting taxes for families, property owners and investors and by Democrats about boosting spending for children's health care, education and welfare — all amid an effort to balance the budget by 2002.

Large revenues

And this wasn't just politicians exhibiting their natural aversion to discussing pain.

The truth is thanks to the hearty economy and resulting huge piles of revenue pouring into government coffers, there was precious little pain in these bills for the immediate future.

"Deficit reduction is not the top priority in this package," said Jim Glassman, senior economist for Chase Securities Inc. in New York.

"It looks like a package of many agendas," such as tax cuts and extra spending.

Lucky lawmakers

"It pays to be lucky, and President Clinton and Congress got lucky this year," said Susan Tanaka, vice president of the Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget, a bipartisan deficit watchdog group. "Because the economy was so strong, both could accomplish their objectives — increased spending for the president, cutting taxes for Republicans and still balancing the budget."

In one measure of how easy Clinton and Congress got off this year, the package contains only $185 billion in net savings, GOP documents show, and still claims to balance the budget by 2002, perhaps sooner if the economy stays strong.

In contrast, President Bush and lawmakers included $482 billion in five-year savings in their 1990 deficit-cutting compromise. Clinton's 1993 package, enacted without a single GOP vote, saved $483 billion over five years.

Rosy future

Also underlining the helpful economy are revenue figures.

In March, the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office said it expected the government to collect $1.86 trillion in revenues in 2002.

But House Republican figures now project that figure at $30 billion higher — even after the new tax cut is supposed to reduce levies in 2002 alone by $22 billion.

Translation: The economy is so strong that policymakers can afford to cut taxes, spend money and still have money left over to eliminate deficits.

And that's exactly what they did. Along with their savings, the packages included $37 billion in new spending over five years for children's health, welfare and other programs, Republican figures show, plus $152 billion in tax cuts.

"There isn't great pain in this budget, but there is restraint," concedes Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., one of the architects of the package.

It's up to you, Caldwell

Caldwell city residents will have a chance to make a difference Tuesday. They are being asked to approve a two-year special tax levy that would raise $1 million for each of the next two years.

The special levy, if passed by the simple majority, will infuse funds into areas that can make Caldwell proud. It would also enhance city and recreation opportunities, give the proposed skateboard park a boost and build a four-plex softball park.

The bulk of the tax money would be used to bring the city into compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act.

Mayor Dick Winder and council members say without the mandated upgrades, a sue-happy person could come in and force the issue — at taxpayer's expense without the opportunity of a vote.

A portion would be used to tear down the old Jefferson Junior High School. It's an eyesore and a community hazard, one city councilman said. We agree. It's time to tear it down.

OUR VIEW

The mayor and City Council members are committed to making things better in Caldwell. They have proved that with several changes in the past four years.

City leaders say even if the levy fails Tuesday, the plan to adopt a more fair, competitive salary plan will move forward. And failure won't hurt the plan to hire three more police officers, two more firefighters (the rural fire department will hire a third) and a dispatcher.

That means the priorities have been set.

The Caldwell City Council refused to allow a special levy election a year ago. This year, the members unanimously voted to let residents decide. That's the way it should be.

This is an opportunity to instill pride in the community.

This is an opportunity to make a difference for future development.

Nothing comes cheap. But as the City Council members said, the tax levy expires in two years.

And its passage, they said, will be one more huge positive step.

It's an opportunity that should not be ignored.

AFTER A BREAK IN THE TRANSMISSION, ONCE AGAIN PATHFINDER SENDS DATA FROM MARS.

CALDWELL LEVY

Yes vote essential to Caldwell's growth

By Chuck Ward

Citizens of Caldwell, on behalf of the Community Services Board, I am writing this letter supporting the Aug. 5 general fund override election in Caldwell. The Community Services Board acts as an advisory board to the mayor and City Council. Our tasks are twofold. First and foremost, we are to learn about what goes on with parks, recreation and the Caldwell Events Center (SimpliStadium and O'Connor Field House). Second, we are to make recommendations to the mayor and Council concerning parks, recreation and the Caldwell Events Center. Our recommendations need to represent the citizens of Caldwell.

Without hesitation, we wholeheartedly support the general fund override election which will be held on Aug. 5.

Caldwell is growing. It is imperative that the citizenry of Caldwell do everything we can to provide a nurturing, safe environment for all of our citizens. Each and every project proposed by the city will greatly benefit our community.

People of all ages enjoy events at the Caldwell Events Center.

Upgrading the restrooms is a must to be in compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act. Changing the baseball field layout will save the city money year after year. Adding dressing rooms will help our high school athletes. Building a new baseball four-plex will fill a huge need for all adults and youth who enjoy baseball and softball.

J.C. Park and Luby Park are used and enjoyed by many. Installing sprinkler systems will allow use all of the time, whereas now they are not usable when we flood irrigate.

Building a walking path will encourage exercise. Again, the bathrooms must be brought up to code. We have to make these changes, we can pay now or pay later. Lights at Luby Field and in the park will encourage more use and increase safety for users.

Memorial Park and our newest park, Whittenberger Park, are also high use areas. Providing a skateboard/in-line skate park for our citizens who enjoy that sport is important. Adults as well as youth will enjoy that area for years to come. Many of our Caldwell citizens have put money and time into the development of Whittenberger Park. All of Caldwell can help this worthwhile project along by passing this override election.

The list goes on and on, tennis courts, Pioneer Plaza, Caldwell Depot, and Old Jefferson Junior

Where to vote

Polls will be open from noon to 8 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 5, at Canyon County Courthouse, 1115 Albany; the Caldwell Public Library, 1010 Dearborn; and the Seventh-day Adventist Community Service Center, 2216 E. Linden.

High School. All of the projects proposed will enhance the recreation and entertainment opportunities in Caldwell.

We encourage all eligible voters to go to the polls Aug. 5. We appreciate the honesty with which the mayor and City Council has made this request.

They have told us that these monies, if approved, will not go towards the waste water treatment plant. Our sewer bills will increase no matter what. They have told us that they want to implement a fair, competitive compensation plan for employees. They have told us they want to hire three more firefighters. They have told us they want to hire two new police officers. Now it is time for us, the citizens, to support each other. Vote yes on the Caldwell override levy on Aug. 5.

Chuck Ward is chairman of the Community Services Board, Caldwell.

Too much pork in this override; vote no

By Thelma Carpenter

Is there anyone in Caldwell who remembers the January Press-Tribune article quoting Mayor Winder wanting to raise city pay? At that time he also stated that an override levy may be possible, and "the money would be pegged for more police and fire personnel."

The Mayor's Feb. 2 response to Mr. Sumter, "residential taxes in no way come near funding all of the services he expects the city government to provide. Commercial building and not residential building is the tax base for development."

Our demographics show that 11.10 percent of our housing is mobile homes. With just that percentage, added to the emphasis of low income and affordable housing these past few years, Caldwell's land value is the lowest of surrounding communities of our size or larger. We have a low tax base to determine revenues for city operations.

Caldwell citizens will be paying over $25 million to get the waste treatment plant up to standard and to prepare for growth. Caldwell does still need more police and fire personnel. Citizens are being asked to carry even more tax burden now, through an override levy of $2 million to fund what? It is not our police or fire departments. Part of this money will:

- Pretty up the Events Center. It is $110,000 in the red so far this year, and there is no guarantee of increasing revenue from the Center. Will it pay for itself with all of that money spent on it? Will it even be able to clear the deficit it has now?
- Spend $300,000 to tear down the old Jefferson Jr. High. This is an albatross that we can bear a while longer. There are other needs much more urgent than demolition, and surely less costly options. The public should require reports and more research to determine what other options are available.

- Parks and Recreation equipment purchase, and capital improvements and maintenance for parks and recreation facilities. The breakdown of costs for bringing restrooms to ADA compliance at one park is $3,000. On the others, we see $70,000 for restrooms plus picnic shelter. ADA compliance is necessary, but new picnic shelters are not.

The remainder of the improvements and capital expenditures are not necessary, just nice.

- $245,000 plus interest not identified for specific expenditures, are for oblique project consultants, future parks and recreation improvements and equipment not already identified, on-going parks and equipment expenses. Where will it really go?

- There is a lot of "pork" in this override. Our city budget projected shortfall of $178,000 in new revenue would not have to be, if our city government pursued commercial building more aggressively, rather than residential.

We are meeting our housing growth needs, but we are not meeting our commercial growth needs. The two stated established goals of city officials are necessary. The manner proposed to spend this override levy is not meeting those goals.

"We the people" are being asked to finance this city government's "wish list."

They are hoping we have short memories of how they ignore our request for what is necessary for our city.

Your "NO" at the voting booth on Aug. 5 is one way to refocus our city officials to the necessary.

Thelma Carpenter is a Caldwell resident.

You're not getting whole story; vote no on override

The override election that is going to be held on Aug. 5, was planned out very carefully. Mayor Dick Winder had a letter sent out in your water bill, to inform you on why he thinks the city needs a $1 million tax hike.

This is a very large tax increase, about $400 for everyone person — children also — in the city to pay for the next couple of years. Very few people will be in town or aware of the election, so the mayor is betting no one will vote. This good for him.

The mayor is also responding to my request I made in a City Council meeting to put nine firefighters on duty. The mayor is asking you to vote for only three firefighters in this election. The City Council let six firefighters go in 1979 who responded to first aid and fire calls which amounted to about 450 calls a year.

Today the first aid and fire calls are over 2,250 calls per year. Why hasn't the city hired more firefighters to keep up with the five-fold increase? We all are at risk right now because of the fire department under-staffing. Most people will not open their water bill until after the election. Second, you people need to read the proposal on what the tax increase is for.

The mayor and the City Council are not telling you the total story. The city of Caldwell has $10,000 by the contractor to remove the Jefferson Junior High School building next to the library. The contractor will remove all asbestos, keep all the brick and steel and level the land, at no cost to the city. Why do we need a parking lot there — for the church across the street? Why doesn't the city charge more money to rent the O'Connor field house to pay for the repairs?

The City Council and the mayor's office should take this million dollars and put the nine firefighters they need now and next year put the other nine firefighters on duty.

We as tax payers of the city of Caldwell, cannot allow this large tax increase to pass. There is too much junk in this measure. Dose Dick Winder have a legacy of high taxes? Vote no to higher taxes.

Greg Farrell
Caldwell

Most projects are old hat; don't pass levy

On July 17 I received a notice from the city of Caldwell that an override election would be held in less than three weeks — on Aug. 5. On looking over the list of things to be done I'm wondering who the mayor and the City Council are working for. Certainly not the taxpayers.

Many, if not most of the projects are old, tired attempts to get the people to pay for things they have said no to many times before. One of the new things they want is money for a skateboard park. If I remember right, Gavin Hogg said the boys would build it themselves. Let them do it! It will give them something to be proud of and the city will be better off, and so will the taxpayers.

Vote no on Aug. 5!

Grace Hall
Caldwell

Vote no; what's the money for anyway?

On Aug. 5, Caldwell is having an override election to raise $200,000 more money. For what?

Caldwell has a lot of houses for sale lately, just look around at all the for sale signs. Companies in Caldwell have laid off hundreds of family people, with no hope for these family people to be called back to work. These family people are having a real tough time of it, some had to give up their homes. Now Caldwell wants to hold a override election to raise taxes.

One might argue that this override will create new jobs for two years, but will they — the city — hire from within Caldwell? It seems to me that the city officials value the stadium, O'Connor Field house, J.C. Park, Luby Park, Memorial Park, Whittenberger Park, tennis courts, Pioneer Plaza, and Caldwell Depot and tearing down the old Jefferson Jr. High — more than they value me having a house, and being able to pay taxes.

I already pay property tax, city tax, county tax, food tax and many more taxes. Maybe the city has plans for my house and yours, or maybe they just want our land. More money will not make better employees. Good-hardworking, people who take pride in their work, make a good employee.

In this same letter the city is telling us they will be increasing our sewer bill by $48 a year per household — plus inflation increases. Wow, can't even use the job without paying! Vote no.

This week's Silver Quill winner

This week's Idaho Press-Tribune Silver Quill Awards goes to Rick Hachtel of Caldwell.

Rick suggested that today's media lead us to believe America's teen-agers are a lost generation. He points out that teens in our area do not fit that stereotype and examples of youth who work hard to attain a better future are prevalent.

If you didn't read the letter, please find it on our web site at <http://www.idahopress.com> or check your July 24 newspaper.

The award is given weekly to the writer of a guest opinion or letter to the editor that, in our judgment, stands out from the crowd.

City comes to grips with Chinese rule

On the surface, little has changed, but court rules nation can limit freedoms

By The Associated Press

HONG KONG — Although Hong Kong had 13 years to prepare for Chinese rule, it's only now coming to grips with what that really means, and the first post-colonial month has yielded two important lessons.

Lesson No. 1 is that nothing much has changed on the surface.

Civil liberties seem intact, the press looks as free as ever, the stock market is setting new record highs. Hong Kong society has seized the "high degree of autonomy" that China promised the British colony in its 1984 agreement on the handover.

Lesson No. 2 came Tuesday in a court ruling that essentially conceded that China reserves the right to limit that autonomy when it chooses.

The ruling averted a constitutional crisis, but troubled jurists worry that the pledge of autonomy was coming undone. Many people in pragmatic, businesslike Hong Kong say the critics are demanding too much.

Hong Kong's Court of Appeal had been asked to judge the legality of the provisional legislature that China installed when it took over

July 1, ousting the elected assembly. The three judges ruled unanimously that they had no power to disqualify the body, since it was ratified by China's parliament.

Under the handover agreement, the territory is to keep its freedoms, legal system and capitalist system.

Critics say the court ruling is an admission that no matter how much autonomy China has promised Hong Kong, China remains the final arbiter, and can change the rules whenever it pleases.

"Hong Kong has been promised autonomy. This autonomy has been taken away by this judgment," Hong Kong constitutional scholar Yash Ghai said.

Selina Chow, a member of the provisional legislature, said the dissenters had to accept the Chinese parliament's supremacy.

Hong Kong has "autonomy, not independence," she said in a debate with Ghai on government radio. "Whether you accept it or not, China is the sovereign power."

"We can go on forever with legal arguments, but after all we have to be practical. We have to get on with life," she said.

Life indeed goes on, in ways that could never be imagined on mainland China.

"There are demonstrations as usual, lawsuits as usual, media scrutiny as usual," said Tung Chee-hwa, the China-appointed leader of the Hong Kong government.

Typhoon sweeps past Hong Kong

HONG KONG (AP) — Typhoon Victor weakened into a severe tropical storm Saturday night after disrupting air, land and sea transport in Hong Kong. One man was killed and 33 people injured.

By late Saturday night, the storm was about 30 miles northwest of Hong Kong, the Hong Kong Observatory said. It was moving north of the Chinese city of Shenzhen at 14 mph.

Police said a man died after he and two other people were swept into the sea in Stanley village, an area in southern Hong Kong noted for its beaches.

The three were pulled from the sea by firemen but the man, an expatriate, died later at a hospital. Police did not disclose his name or nationality.

A government statement said only 11 of the injured were hospitalized, most with minor injuries from flying glass or falling objects.

Packing winds of up to 75 mph, Typhoon Victor ripped off signboards and building scaffolding in Hong Kong. No major damage was reported.

Shops, schools and banks closed early. Public transportation was curtailed, and ferry services to mainland China and the neighboring Portuguese enclave of Macau were suspended. Officials said 181 flights at Hong Kong airport were delayed, canceled or diverted.

Cunanan wanted to be somebody, Dad says

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Andrew Cunanan had a peaceful childhood and his goal was to "be somebody" when he grew up, his father said in an interview Saturday.

"He never saw violence in our household," Modesto Cunanan told ABS-CBN television. "That was never part of his growing up years."

Andrew Cunanan, who killed himself on July 23, was suspected in the July 15 slaying of fashion designer Gianni Versace in Miami. He was also the prime suspect in four killings in Minnesota, Illinois and New Jersey.

"Even to this day I'm very very doubtful whether I could really believe that the son I raised from the cradle is actually capable of that kind of violence," said Modesto Cunanan, who fled to his native Philippines in 1988 amid allegations he had embezzled funds from his stock-brokerage company.

Victim found alive days after landslide

Rescue crews work 12 hours to free man from wreckage of ski resort

By The Associated Press

THREDBO, Australia — Weary from a night of digging and finding only bodies, rescuers had nearly abandoned hope of finding any survivors Saturday under the wreckage of a ski resort buried by a landslide.

Suddenly, their sensitive detectors picked up what sounded like a muffled voice coming from under a concrete slab.

As a police spokesman later put it, emergency crews went "ballistic."

Fireman Steve Hirst told rescuers to hold off with their chain saws and lay down on the ground.

"Rescue team working overhead, can anyone hear me?" he shouted.

"I can hear you!" came the response.

For the next 12 hours, searchers, including Stuart Diver's brother, worked frantically to free the 30-year-old Australian ski instructor.

They drilled a 4-inch hole through the unstable wreckage, pumped in hot air to warm him, and handed the dehydrated Diver liquids and a flashlight. Sometimes they just held his hand.

They pulled him from his icy tomb Saturday evening, 65 hours after the landslide.

"A miracle has occurred," said police inspector Charlie Sanderson.

So far, Diver is the only survivor of 20 people buried when the side of a mountain in this tiny ski hamlet gave way just before midnight Wednesday, dropping uprooted trees and tons of earth onto two ski lodges where tourists and resort workers had been sleeping.

Six bodies had been found but 13 other people were still missing. Two of the 20 were Americans.

Diver, who suffered multiple scrapes and some frostbite to his feet, was conscious during the ordeal. He was airlifted to a hospital in Canberra, where his relieved mother, father and brother visited him.

Doctors said he was in stable condition and would probably be released in a day or two.

Officials said Diver's peak physical condition helped him survive when temperatures plunged to 16 degrees during the nights.

Diver was also a volunteer firefighter at the popular resort in New South Wales, about 185 miles south of Sydney.

Cheers echoed off the mountainside and some onlookers wept as Diver, breathing with the aid of an oxygen mask, was brought out by stretcher.

Bells rang out at the local chapel, where a vigil service was being held for the victims.

The rescue was all the more emotional given that the risk of further landslides had prevented rescuers from entering the site until 11 hours after the disaster.

By then, the cries of buried victims, calling for help, had faded, and in the two days since, relatives were told it was unlikely their loved ones would be found alive.

Diver's rescue raised their hopes, despite the obstacles — and danger — rescuers had to overcome to free him.

At one point Saturday, rescuers had to leave the area because of the threat of another landslide. Even then, two ambulance workers remained behind, "at great peril to themselves," Sanderson said.

A geologist was brought in to assess the stability of the area and work quickly resumed. Gingerly the crews dug through the debris, at times using their hands.

Of the 20 caught in the slide, 17 were Australians, two Americans and one a New Zealander.

None of the bodies had been identified by authorities yet, and police had not released the names of the missing.

The Americans were identified by the national newspaper The Australian as Mim and Mike Sodergren, 41 and 46, respectively, of Tahoe City, Calif.

Tomatoes rot in India after cancer scare

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Tomatoes are rotting in a southern Indian city after newspapers reported that eating them causes cancer, a report said Saturday.

The glut began a few weeks ago in Bangalore after some local newspapers reported that tomatoes are carcinogenic. Despite assurances by doctors and state officials, many people are refusing to buy tomatoes. The Times of India newspaper reported.

Health authorities said that pesticides sprayed on vegetables can be injurious to health when ingested over a long time. But they said that thoroughly washing vegetables removes most pesticides.

Bangalore is 1,250 miles south of New Delhi.

Bus crash kills 22, injures 48 in Peru

LIMA, Peru (AP) — A bus loaded with passengers has plunged into a ravine in southern Peru, killing 22 and injuring 48, police said.

The bus was traveling down a highway Friday outside Nazca, 280 miles southeast of Lima, when its brakes failed, initial police reports said.

The bus was en route from the Andean city of Cuzco to Nazca when the incident occurred. There were no reports of any foreigners on board.

Survivors said they cautioned the bus driver about the vehicle's mechanical problems but the driver ignored their warnings.

Representatives of the Civa bus company, which operated the bus, said the accident was caused by dense fog, not mechanical failure.

Bosnia faces sanctions after deadline

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — An international envoy threatened Bosnia with sanctions if its squabbling leaders don't agree on key measures to integrate the government by Monday.

The representatives of Bosnia's ethnic-based statelets had until Aug. 1 to make decisions about ambassadors, passports, citizenship and the opening of airports. But on Saturday, the envoy extended the deadline for the first three decisions to Monday and gave another two weeks for the airports question.

His threat was that the 30 countries and the United Nations now hosting Bosnian ambassadors would no longer recognize them.

"The international community is not going to deal with the ambassadors because they do not represent Bosnia-Herzegovina," said Carlos Westendorp, the international peace coordinator in Bosnia.

Ex-warlord inaugurated as president

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — Former warlord Charles Taylor was sworn in as Liberia's president Saturday, a position he sought for seven years on the battlefield and finally achieved at the ballot box.

Two weeks after winning 75 percent of the vote in the country's first postwar election, Taylor, dressed in flowing African robes, promised to immediately set up commissions aimed at guaranteeing human rights and promoting reconciliation in the troubled west African nation.

"Liberia has burned itself for seven years but will rise from the ashes again," Taylor, 49, told an audience that included eight African heads of state. Among them was the Nigerian leader, Gen. Sani Abacha, whose troops composed the bulk of an African peacekeeping force credited with ensuring security during the peaceful, largely trouble-free vote.

Peacekeeping troops maintained a heavy presence around the Centennial Hall in central Monrovia, one of the few buildings not badly damaged in fighting that engulfed the capital from April to June 1996.

The battle, which killed hundreds and prompted the U.S. military evacuation of about 2,000 foreigners, was the final explosion in a war that Taylor began on Christmas Eve in 1989 when he launched an invasion to overturn President Samuel Doe's dictatorship.

Caldwell second baseman Brent Sasaki tags out a Boise Capital base runner in the first inning on Saturday.

Streaks bat way to win at state

Caldwell opens with 13-10 victory over Capitals, takes on Lewiston today at 1:05 p.m.By Rob Lundgren
Idaho Press-Tribune

BOISE — Caldwell's bats were as hot as the weather as the Silver Streaks pounded out a 13-10 victory over the Boise Capitals in a first round game of the American Legion AA state tournament Saturday night.

Led by Jason Roorda's 3-for-4 effort, which included a double, triple, and three-run homer, the Streaks knocked the host club into the loser's bracket. Caldwell (23-26) will play Lewiston today at 1:05 p.m. on the Capital High diamond. Lewiston defeated Pocatello 6-2 on Saturday.

"Hopefully we can keep it going."

said Caldwell head coach Will Barber. "We have to get better tomorrow. We have to do a better job on the mound. We'll have to hold them to four or five runs."

Roorda, who hit three home runs in a game during last week's district tournament, was on fire again Saturday night, starting with a dramatic two-out blast in the third inning which gave the Streaks their first lead of the night, 4-3.

"I saw the ball well tonight," he said, "but I think everybody saw the ball well. We're a good tournament team and I was glad we took our bats into the state tournament."

"That got us going," Barber said of Roorda's three-run which easily cleared the left center field fence. "We got the big two-out hits in the district tournament and we continued that tonight."

Designated hitter Bryce Moore also delivered, knocking in a pair of runs with two out. Caldwell took the lead for good scoring three runs in the fifth inning off Capitals starter Tony Piccotti, who had a big night at the plate with a pair of two-run home runs and a total of four hits.

However, it was Piccotti's own throwing error which kept the inning alive for the Streaks and Dan Benedick, Roorda, and Moore all came up with two-out RBIs.

In addition to a 13-hit attack, Caldwell played errorless defense led by third baseman Brad Bowman and shortstop Darren Uranga.

"And Bowman makes those look so easy," Barber noted.

Jason Wonderlich picked up the victory and worked into the ninth inning, although he gave up three home runs and a total of 11 base hits.

Barber called on lefthander Andy Dux to get the final two outs, and Dux did that by getting Bobby Fern on a weak pop-up and Jim Madarieta to ground into a game-ending fielder's choice.

RETIRING THE TRADITIONAL

Explosive charges weaken the structure holding up Fulton County Stadium Saturday in Atlanta. The stadium, home of the Braves from 1966-1996, was imploded to make room for a parking lot for the Braves new home, seen behind at left.

Fulton County Stadium bites dust

House that Hank built crumbles down as Braves clear room for parking lot

By The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium, the former home of the Atlanta Braves, was turned into a pile of rubble Saturday.

Some 1,600 pounds of explosives were set off at 8:04 a.m., and it took only 27 seconds to turn the approximately 35,000 cubic yards of concrete and 10,000 tons of structural steel into a mangled mess amidst a cloud of dust that hovered above the site for several minutes before disappearing in the solid blue sky.

"It was excellent, real good. Everything went off perfectly, just as we expected," said Steve Pettigrew, president of Franklin, Tenn.-based Demolition Dynamics Inc.

A crowd estimated at 30,000 by Atlanta police, including mayor Bill Campbell and Atlanta Braves executives John Schuerholz and Stan Kasten, watched from several vantage points outside an 800-foot buffer zone.

The cleanup, set to begin Monday, should take about 45 days.

Workers will then come in and pave the 14-acres into a parking lot for the Braves' new home, Turner Field.

The new stadium sits just across the street from the old stadium, where Hank Aaron's famous 715th home run in 1974 broke Babe Ruth's record.

"There's a lot of history wrapped up in that stadium," Campbell said. "It really sort of heralded our entry into major-league sports, the first southern city to have a pro-sports franchise."

The stadium was home to the baseball Braves, who moved from Milwaukee in 1966 to Atlanta, and the NFL Falcons, an expansion team that same season.

The Falcons moved out of the stadium and into the Georgia Dome in 1992. The Braves, once the laughing-stock of the National League, became the dominant team in the majors beginning in 1991 when they won the NL title after finishing last in 1990. The Braves have been to the World Series four times since 1991, winning the title in 1995 by beating the Cleveland Indians in six games.

The Braves moved to Turner Field, formerly Atlanta's

Olympic Stadium, at the beginning of this baseball season.

"I have a lot of fond memories about Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium," said Schuerholz, the general manager credited with turning the Braves around when he climbed aboard prior to the 1991 season. "I just think it's an occasion I wanted to experience more for the memories than for anything else."

The stadium was the second Atlanta landmark to go out with a bang within seven days. The Omni, home of the NBA's Atlanta Hawks, was leveled last weekend to make way for a new basketball and hockey arena.

It was a day of mixed emotions for Clyde "Doc" Partin, a professor of physical education at Atlanta's Emory University, who has worked part time at the stadium since it was built.

"I don't know whether I should break down and cry or what," said Partin, whose jobs with the Braves included running the scoreboard and matrix board as well as two years as official scorer.

entry into major-league sports, the first southern city to have a pro-sports franchise.'*

'Deep'
Lasorda

By The Associated Press

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. — One day in spring training a few years ago, some writers arrived in Vero Beach, Fla., to discuss the Los Angeles Dodgers with the team's resident cheerleader, manager Tom Lasorda.

The Indicators

- Tommy Lasorda
- Phil Niekro
- Nellie Fox
- Willie Wells

"You guys better put on your glasses," Thomas warned. "It's getting pretty deep over there."

It usually does when Lasorda talks about his beloved Dodgers. This is a man genuinely in love with this team, his team.

Lasorda was no baseball mercenary. Except for a short stopover in Kansas City that was like no other relief pitchers — brief and ineffective — Lasorda was a one-organization man. He was signed by the Dodgers as a lean left-handed pitcher when the franchise was in Brooklyn and he still works for the team 48 years, and several thousand pastime meals later.

Sandberg retires
again, for good

CHICAGO (AP) — Ryne Sandberg is retiring again. And this time, he says, it's for good.

Sandberg, 37, who has a better fielding percentage and more home runs than any second baseman in baseball history, announced Saturday he will call it quits at the end of the season, his 15th with the Chicago Cubs.

Sandberg's first retirement, on June 10, 1984, did not bring contentment. He left a $7 million per season contract after 57 games, saying he was unhappy with his performance. He was also displeased with the way the team was being run at the time by then-general manager Larry Himes.

However, his failing marriage and his dispute over the custody of his two children also were factors. On Saturday, his second wife and family were by his side outside the Cubs dugout when he made his announcement.

Neagle's 7 shutout innings end sweep dreams for Marlins

By The Associated Press

MIAMI — Denny Neagle pitched seven shutout innings and the Atlanta Braves beat the Florida Marlins 4-2, ensuring the Marlins would not sweep the four-game series between the NL East contenders.

The Marlins won the first two meetings, but Neagle restored the Braves' lead in 6 1/2 games going into Sunday's wrapup. Florida manager Jim Leyland was ejected as both teams, for the second night in a row, took turns challenging the umpires.

Expos 6, Padres 0

MONTREAL — Carlos Perez pitched a five-hitter for his fifth career shutout and Rondell White and David Segui hit consecutive home runs in the fifth inning as the Montreal Expos beat the San Diego Padres.

Perez (11-6) got his fourth shutout this season, tying him with teammate Pedro Martinez and Houston's Darryl Kile for the major league lead, and reached the 11-win plateau for the first time in his career.

Cubs 5, Dodgers 1

CHICAGO — Ryne Sandberg homered

in his first two at-bats, singled, walked, went 3-for-3 and stole a base to lead the Chicago Cubs past the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-1 Saturday.

Chicago's victory snapped two streaks — the Cubs' nine-game losing skid and the Dodgers' seven-game winning tear.

Cardinals 2, Phillies 1

PHILADELPHIA — Mark McGwire got his first NL hit and also scored the go-ahead run Saturday as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Philadelphia Phillies.

Todd Stottlemyre (11-7) pitched eight strong innings and the Cardinals snapped a four-game losing streak. Philadelphia's season-high four-game winning string ended.

Astros 6, Mets 0

HOUSTON — Mike Hampton pitched a three-hitter and Jeff Bagwell hit his 29th home run, leading the Houston Astros over the New York Mets for their 12th win in 14 games.

Hampton (9-7) won his sixth straight decision, tying a career best set in 1995. He struck out seven and walked three.

Pirates 6, Rockies 5

PITTSBURGH — Joe Randa's two-run triple was one of only two Pittsburgh hits in a five-run fifth inning and the Pirates held off a four-run Colorado comeback in the eighth to beat the Rockies.

Larry Walker homered for the third straight game and also had an RBI double for Colorado. The Rockies lost despite out-hitting Pittsburgh 13-5.

Reds 5, Giants 1

CINCINNATI — Brian Tenna struck out a career-high 10 batters as he returned to the Cincinnati starting rotation and the Reds hit three homers off Mark Gardner for the win.

The Giants have relinquished sole possession of first place in the NL West by going 9-14 since the All-Star break.

Kansas City's Jeff King slides under Boston second baseman Jeff Frye as he breaks up a double play attempt.

Clemens blows 4-run lead to Tigers

By The Associated Press

DETROIT — Roger Clemens could not hold a four-run lead as Detroit defeated Toronto 8-7 on reliever Paul Quantrill's throwing error in the eighth inning.

Clemens, pitching at Tiger Stadium for the first time since striking out 20 last Sept. 18 while with Boston, was trying for his major league-leading 17th win.

Clemens struck out nine, walked four and gave up 10 hits in six-plus innings. The three-time Cy Young Award winner, who leads the majors with a 1.78 ERA, had allowed just five earned runs in his previous eight starts.

Indians 7, Rangers 3

ARLINGTON, Texas — Jim Thome hit a tiebreaking three-run homer in the sixth to help John Smiley's successful debut as Cleveland handed Texas its fifth straight loss.

Marquis Grissom and Brian Giles singled before Thome hit his 29th homer over the center-field wall off Bobby Witt (10-7).

Orioles 13, Athletics 3

OAKLAND, Calif. — Mike Bordick homered and drove in a career-high five runs as Mike Mussina and the Baltimore Orioles overcame a shaky start to beat the Oakland Athletics.

Mussina (12-4) surrendered three runs in the first inning, two of them unearned. But he did not allow an other run before leaving after the seventh, and defeated Oakland for the 12th time in 15 career decisions.

Twins 5, Yankees 4

NEW YORK — Paul Molitor homered and drove in two runs as the Minnesota Twins snapped New York's four-game winning streak.

Molitor gave the Twins a 3-2 lead in the sixth inning with a solo shot. His drive hit the top of the left-center field fence at the 399-foot sign and bounced over for his seventh home run.

Rich Becker added a two-run homer off David Cone (11-5) in the seventh as Minnesota went ahead 5-2.

Greg Swindell (7-2) pitched 3 1/3 innings in relief of rookie Shane Bowers. Swindell allowed only Bernie Williams' 11th home run in the eighth inning.

Royals 10, Red Sox 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Dean Palmer homered twice and drove in four runs and the Kansas City Royals hit a season-high five homers in beating the Boston Red Sox 10-3 Saturday.

Palmer, who was sent from Texas to Kansas City on July 25, is 12-for-34 with two home runs and eight RBIs since the trade.

Angels 5, White Sox 2

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Dennis Springer and Troy Percival combined on a five-hitter as the Anaheim Angels defeated the Chicago White Sox 5-2 Saturday night.

The Angels won for the 20th time in 26 games.

M's rout Brewers

By The Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Paul Sorrento and the slugging Seattle Mariners brought the Milwaukee Brewers and rookie pitcher Steve Woodard back to reality.

Sorrento drove in six runs with a grand slam and a double and Ken Griffey Jr., Russ Davis, Rob Ducey and Edgar Martinez also homered Saturday night in a 14-4 rout of Milwaukee, which ended the Brewers' nine-game winning streak.

"Junior and Sorrento had big nights offensively," Mariners manager Lou Piniella said. "And the rest of these guys all pitched in also. Hopefully this will get us started."

The victory snapped the Brewers' longest winning streak since 1987 as well as Seattle's four-game losing streak.

Woodard (1-1), a rookie right-hander, fell apart after a 12-strikeout major league debut Monday that tied an American League record set in 1915. In just two innings Saturday, Woodard gave up six runs on seven hits, including a two-run double to Sorrento in the first inning and a two-run homer to Griffey in the second.

"I just didn't have it today," said Woodard, who pitched eight innings of one-hit ball Monday to beat his idol, Roger Clemens, and the Toronto Blue Jays 1-0. "You've seen my high and how you've seen my low. Hopefully there's a medium out there."

Jeff Fassero (10-6) gave up nine hits and two runs and struck out seven in six innings for the Mariners. Sorrento thought that was more important than the club's hitting.

"We're going to swing the bats," Sorrento said. "I don't think we're going to have any trouble doing that. More importantly, Jeff stepped up. He went out and shut down a team that was on a nine-game win streak. That's tough to do."

Norm Charlton pitched the seventh, Bob Wells the eighth, and Heathcliff Slocumb made his debut for Seattle with a hitless ninth.

The Pied Piper of Dodgers blue will be inducted into the Hall of Fame today, and it's not for his 0-4 career pitching record. It is instead for managing the Dodgers to 1,599 victories, No. 13 on the all-time list, in 20 memorable seasons. It is for making it to four World Series, six League Championship Series and two division series. It is for managing 61 postseason games, second only to Casey Stengel's 63. And it is for being one of baseball's best ambassadors.

Also being inducted into the Hall are: 318-game winner Phil Niekro, elected by the Baseball Writers' Association of America; second baseman Nellie Fox, elected like Lasorda by the committee on veterans; and Negro Leagues slugger Willie Wells. The J.G. Taylor Spink award will go to longtime New York and Pittsburgh sports writer Charley Feeney, and the Ford C. Frick Award will be presented to Jimmy Dudley, voice of the Cleveland Indians from 1948-67.

Lasorda was a salesman. He'd win the incentive trip to Hawaii every year. He knew how to sell the Dodgers to America and the players to themselves.

"Jimmy's a very psychologically astute person," said longtime Dodgers catcher Mike Scioscia, now a coach with the team. "He knows how to read people and knows what they need to get them going. And that's what made him a great manager."

Streaks: Wonderlich wins

"Jason battled for us," Barber said. "His breaking ball wasn't where we wanted it, so he had to use his fastball more than he wanted to. I wanted to use Dux because the last time we played them we used all righthanders. It was just a change."

In Saturday's other games, the Boise Gems got past West Kootenai (Trail, B.C.), 6-4; Meridian blasted Upper Valley, 19-0; and Lewiston stopped Pocatello, 6-2.

Today's action finds West Kootenai battling Upper Valley at 10:05 in a loser-out contest, followed by the Caldwell-Lewiston match-up at 1:05.

The Gems face Meridian at 5:05, and the Capitals will play Pocatello at 8:05 in the other loser-out game.

Used Cars To Be Sold For $5, $199, & $699!

One of the Northwest's largest Automalls is overstocked and ready to sell cars & trucks for as low as 5 dollars, this Wednesday only.

Advertisement

One of Idaho's largest volume new and used Automalls just announced plans to hold their famous Five Dollar Hands-On used car and truck sale on Wednesday, August 6, 1997. According to General Manager Butch Freeman, recent record sales and factory purchases from the last few months have resulted in an overstock. Now, the inventory must be reduced to a more manageable level.

"During this Five Dollar Sale, every used car and truck WILL BE SOLD FOR BELOW ITS ORIGINAL PRICE. In fact, there will be some cars sold for five dollars. Our customers will find these prices lower than any reduced prices in town. This is a perfect opportunity to get a good quality used vehicle at the lowest price possible," states Mr. Freeman.

All cars and trucks will be displayed at the Larry Miller Automall, 6009 Cleveland Blvd. Caldwell, Idaho. At 9:00 a.m. all vehicles will be unlocked, so that buyers may inspect them for one hour before the sale which begins at 10:00 a.m. WHOEVER IS SITTING BEHIND THE WHEEL AT 10:00 a.m. WHEN THE PRICES ARE POSTED ON THE WINDSHIELD WILL BE GIVEN THE FIRST OPPORTUNITY TO PURCHASE THAT VEHICLE AT THE SALE PRICE.

LARRY MILLER AUTOMALL

Midway on The Boulevard, Nampa/Caldwell, Idaho • 454-6000

Prices do not include tax, license, title or $89.00 dealer doc. fees.

This "hands-on" approach to selling used vehicles will make it easy and quick for anybody in the market for a good used car or truck to buy at a VERY LOW PRICE WITH NO HASSLE. Appraisers will be on hand to give top dollar for any trade. There will also be five business managers available to help buyers arrange low-cost financing on their purchase.

You will be able to choose from an inventory of close to 650 specially priced new and used cars and trucks totalling over $9.1 million. And, with the best selection of factory and pre-owned, low mileage vehicles with remaining factory warranties, you'll want to arrive early for the best choice.

This one day sales event begins Wednesday August 6, at 10:00 a.m. and ends at 6:00 p.m., when the prices are removed and normal operations resume. All vehicles are sold on a first come, first served basis — WHEN THEY'RE GONE, THEY'RE GONE! The Larry Miller Automall would rather allow local customers to buy these overstocked vehicles than wholesale them at auction.

THE BEST PRICES AND SELECTION WILL BE FOUND AT THE LARRY MILLER AUTOMALL, MIDWAY ON THE BOULEVARD, NAMPA/CALDWELL, IDAHO.

Juli Inkster, tied for second in the du Maurier Classic, watches her shot.

Robbins holds off du Maurier field

By The Associated Press

OAKVILLE, Ontario — Kelly Robbins found herself at the top of a far more crowded leaderboard than she had hoped Saturday, struggling to an even-par 73 in the third round of the du Maurier Classic.

"It was quite a grind for me, and it seems like every day someone gets hot," said Robbins, who had a one-stroke lead over Brandie Burton and Juli Inkster. "It wouldn't surprise me if someone crept up on the leaderboard."

Robbins, who shot a tournament-best 65 on Friday, had a 10-under 209 total on the Glen Abbey Golf Club course. Burton, who has overcome knee, wrist, back and rib injuries in the last three years, shot a 66.

"It's hard to keep up with the injuries," said Burton, who had seven birdies — four on the five par-5s — and one bogey. "I'm 100 percent healthy right now, which I haven't usually been at this stage of the year."

The other players didn't make it easy on the former Arizona State star either, with five of her fairway shots landing in divots.

"I had a lot of practice hitting out of divots," said Burton, winless since 1993. "It's nice to get the nerve working — I've got the butterflies flying around again."

Inkster shot a 71. Rosie Jones (71) and Sweden's Liselotte Neumann (73) were two back at 211, while Hall of Famer Betty King followed at 212 with Cindy Figg-Currier and Tina Barrett. Australia's Karrie Webb and Colleen Walker also remained in contention at 213.

Mickelson taps International

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. — Phil Mickelson is back on familiar turf in a tournament he has won and in a contending position he is accustomed to.

Mickelson carded six birdies in a bogey-free round to build off Nike Tour veteran Skip Kendall and maintain his lead in the weather-delayed International on Saturday.

"I'm excited to be back in the hunt," he said. "It's been a while for me."

Mickelson won the Bay Hill Invitational in late March, but in nine tournaments since then has managed only one top-10 finish — a tie for ninth — and has missed the cut twice.

His mini-slump has seen him slip to ninth place in the battle for the 111 automatic Ryder Cup positions.

"Knowing I'm on the bubble and not planning to play next week, I'm focusing on this tournament to give me a cushion for the Ryder Cup team," he said.

Mickelson had a 54-hole total of 39 points under the modified

Stableford scoring system, setting a tournament scoring record for the second straight day.

John Daly set the previous three-round record of 31 in 1992.

Mickelson already owns the 72-hole record of 45 points, set in 1993.

Kendall finished at 34, and Stuart Appleby had 32. Jay Haas was next at 29, followed by Dudley Hart at 28. Nick Price was in a group at 27.

Berley, Irwin lead Seniors

CONCORD, Mass. — Bob Berley, a one-time motorcycle cop plagued by injuries in recent years, is building off on plans to quit the Senior PGA Tour for a career building log cabins in Idaho.

Berley, 57, playing on a sponsor exemption, shot a 6-under-par 66 on Saturday for a share of the second-round lead with Hale Irwin in the BankBoston Senior Classic.

"It's nice to be here, it's been a long time coming," said Berley, who won the 1993 tournament for his first tour title.

"I hit the ball terrible Friday and I called a man who has been working with me on my golf swing, Rick Deacon in Idaho. I've made some radical changes in my swing after three shoulder surgeries and four knee surgeries."

"I got things straightened away and today I hit some good shots. It was a pretty solid round."

Irwin, 52, seeking his sixth victory of the season, shot a 67 to join Berley at 8-under 136 on the Nashville course.

The three-time U.S. Open winner is coming off a victory two weeks ago in the Burnet Senior Classic.

"I hit only five greens yesterday, so I hit the ball better today," said Irwin, who closed with a birdie. "The birdie was a good way to finish today. I feel good going into the final round tomorrow."

Tom Wargo was a stroke back after a 68, and Jerry McGee was two behind the leaders after 70. Bob Wynn (68), Bob Duval (68), Tony Jacklin (70), Dan Wood (70) and John Jacobs (71) followed at 5-under 139.

Economic Rudd wins Brickyard 400

By The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — It certainly looked like Jeff Gordon and Dale Jarrett would write another chapter in their epic struggle for supremacy on the NASCAR circuit.

But fuel economy replaced speed as the issue in the closing laps of the Brickyard 400, and neither was able to match the conservative approach Ricky Rudd used Saturday to win the most lucrative event in stock car racing.

The shame of it was that crowd of 320,000 at Indianapolis Motor Speedway didn't get to see a shootout between the two top Winston Cup drivers. Late caution flags made it possible for Rudd to cover the final 46 laps without a fuel stop. Gordon and Jarrett, who had driven off in tandem, had to come in with 13 laps remaining.

"You can't control when the cautions come out, and that won the race for Rudd and lost it for me and Jarrett," Gordon said after finishing fourth. "I really think it was between me and Jarrett."

He felt empty afterward, seemingly bothered by the unanswered question.

"We didn't get to battle it out the way I thought we would," the Winston Cup points leader said. "It was pretty exciting and very interesting."

They even exchanged the lead twice on the 137th lap.

"There are only certain people you can race with like that and know that they're not going to wreck you," Jarrett said after settling for third behind Rudd and Bobby Labonte. "It's interesting for the fans, and it's great to race with a competitor like that."

The 1996 season began with Jarrett winning his second Daytona 500. He won three more races and had a shot at a $1 million bonus before a few cents worth of oil sent him into the wall in the Southern 500.

The winner that day was Gordon, who has a chance for that same bonus at Darlington on Labor Day weekend. Among those he must beat is Jarrett, who spoiled Gordon's chance to become the only driver to win four straight races at troublesome Darlington with a victory five months ago in the TransSouth 400.

In June they fought each other one more time, until Jarrett slowed approaching an accident at Dover. Gordon, running just behind him, rammed him. The mishap took both cars from contention. Ironically, Rudd got his other 1997 victory that day in the Miller 500.

Seattle's Phillip Daniels (93) forces a fumble by Cardinals quarterback Stoney Case (15) in the second quarter on Saturday. Case recovered the fumble.

New-lease Seahawks look sharp

By The Associated Press

SEATTLE — Billionaire Paul Allen saw what a computer full of money will buy in the NFL on Saturday night.

The co-founder of the Microsoft Corp., hailed as a hero for keeping the Seahawks in town, made his Seattle debut as the team's owner a successful one when the Seahawks beat Arizona 34-6 in an exhibition game.

Allen watched John Friesz and Warren Moon, Seattle's top two quarterbacks, get the Seahawks off to a 17-6 halftime lead, although wide receiver Brian Blades and running back Chris Warren were injured in the first quarter. Blades suffered a lower back sprain and Warren received a rib injury.

The Seahawks (1-1) got 8-for-12 passing from Friesz, while Moon, the oldest player in the NFL at 40 going into his 20th pro season, completed his first eight passes.

On a fourth-and-1 from the Arizona 2, Moon rolled out to his right on a naked bootleg and found tight end Deems May in the back of the end zone with a touchdown pass to give Seattle a 14-3 lead with 3:56 left in the second quarter.

Friesz directed the Seahawks to their first touchdown, a 4-yard run by Lamar Smith, in the first minute of the second quarter after a bad center snap by Kevin Mawae cost them a field goal in the opening period. Rick Tuten couldn't handle Mawae's bouncing snap and Todd Peterson didn't get a chance to kick a 27-yard field goal with 5:37 gone.

Peterson booted a 51-yarder with 1:36 left in the first half.

Friesz, who took the starting job away from Rick Mirer last season, passed for 95 yards, including a 33-yarder to Joey Galloway to set up Seattle's first touchdown. Moon was 8-for-10 for 67 yards.

Arizona (0-1) got field goals of 36 and 41 yards from Kevin Butler in the first half when the Cardinals used Kent Graham and Stoney Case at quarterback. Graham, the starter, was 4-for-4 for 13 yards, while Case was 9-for-14 for 115 yards, including a 41-yarder to Stevie Anderson late in the opening half.

It was an entertaining day for Allen, but also an expensive one. Before the game, he dished out $10 million in signing bonuses to top draft picks Shawn Springs and Walter Jones.

Springs, who has signed a contract, and Jones, who is expected to sign one Sunday, watched the game from the sideline. They will join the Seahawks for practice Monday after missing the first 18 days of training camp.

It got worse for the Cardinals in the third quarter when Gino Torretta, who is not expected to make the Seahawks' roster because coach Dennis Erickson likes World League star Jon Kitna so much, rallied Seattle for 10 more points. Steve Broussard scored on a 5-yard run and Peterson kicked a 35-yard field goal.

Oilers don't draw, do much

By The Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — The former Houston Oilers played their first home game in Tennessee on Saturday night. Few people noticed.

Except for the lack of a roof overhead, the Liberty Bowl Memorial Stadium looked a lot like the Astrodome of last year, with empty seats outnumbering the 22,811 who watched as the New Orleans Saints beat the Oilers 12-10.

The Saints, with new coach Mike Ditka and former Tennessee quarterback Heath Shuler, had more support than the Oilers thanks to a small pocket of fans dressed in gold T-shirts and waving a flag.

The Oilers, who won't be back again until the season opener Aug. 31, will need the next four weeks to work out the kinks found in the place they're calling home until their new stadium is finished in Nashville.

The line for extra points was painted at the 3 used for college instead of the 2 as used by the NFL and the referee's microphone worked infrequently. In the press box, statistic sheets didn't reflect the Oilers' new home and listed "HO" for Houston Oilers instead.

Reporters requiring help to figure out the action on the field didn't get it, since there was no announcer in the press box. Opening a window didn't make it any better since the public address announcer was barely audible.

The Oilers also didn't do much to whip up enthusiasm in their new state until late in the fourth quarter when the first team on the bench, Steve McNair, now the No. 1 quarterback after two seasons of learning, was 5-of-10 for 72 yards. He also fumbled the ball away midway through the second quarter, and veteran Ronnie Harmon fumbled on the Oilers' next drive.

Shuler, who didn't throw a pass while playing with the Washington Redskins last season, finished 9-of-12 for 104 yards. He also scored on a 1-yard drive on the Saints' opening 75-yard drive.

Vikings 24, Rams 6
MINNEAPOLIS — Brad Johnson just kept getting better and better and better for the Minnesota Vikings.

Johnson threw first-half touchdown passes of 24 yards to Chris Carter and 43 yards to Chris Walsh to lead the Vikings to a 24-6 victory over the St. Louis Rams on Saturday night.

Johnson, who had the third-best quarterback rating in the NFL last season after replacing Warren Moon at midseason, helped ruin Rams coach Dick Vermeil's return to the sidelines after a 15-year hiatus.

Giants 21, Ravens 20
BALTIMORE — Jim Fassel

Saints quarterback Heath Shuler reacts after a one-yard touchdown run in the first quarter against the Tennessee Oilers on Saturday.

won his NFL coaching debut Saturday night as Brad Daluisio's fourth field goal, a 29-yarder with 1:57 left, gave the New York Giants a 21-20 exhibition victory over the Baltimore Ravens.

Fassel, hired to turn around a team that went 6-10 last season, wasn't assured of the victory until the Ravens botched the snap on an attempted 37-yard field goal attempt as time expired.

The Giants fell into a 10-0 hole after fumbling the opening kickoff and on their third play from scrimmage. But New York (1-0) rallied from a 17-5 deficit and won despite fumbling five times.

Steelers 28, Chiefs 14
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — James Hasty didn't play Saturday night and had a great game.

The tight cornerback, who is holding out of Kansas City's training camp demanding more money, had to be all smiles after Kordell Stewart sliced up the secondary in a 28-14 Pittsburgh victory in the Chiefs' exhibition opener.

With Stewart looking sharp for a second straight outing, the Steelers (2-0) took charge with a 21-point second quarter.

Elvis Grbac, the third straight former San Francisco backup the Chiefs have signed as their starting quarterback, sparkled in his debut, hitting five of six passes for 43 yards in a 77-yard touchdown drive.

Jets 31, Eagles 17
EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Aaron Glenn got the Bill Parcells era started with a weaving 97-yard interception return for a touchdown, and the New York Jets rolled to a 31-17 exhibition victory over Philadelphia on Saturday night.

Parcells, who took over as coach of the Jets after they went 1-15 and he led New England into the Super Bowl last season, said he was more interested in evaluating talent than winning. And Glenn, a fourth-year cornerback, showed plenty of talent in his electrifying run through the Eagles' offensive line, giving the Jets a 7-0 lead.

Typical of last year for the Jets, the Eagles came back to trail 14-10 after New York led 14-3 at halftime, but backup quarterback Glenn Foley led three second-half scoring drives to put New York safely in front.

Redskins 20, Bucs 8
TAMPA, Fla. — Alvin Harper stunned his former team with a 60-yard touchdown reception and James Thrash scored on a 91-yard kickoff return Saturday night to lead the Washington Redskins to a 20-8 exhibition victory over the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

While first-round draft pick Warrick Dunn made an impressive debut with 75 yards rushing on 13 carries, quarterback Trent Dilfer and the first-string offense produced only one first down in the one quarter the unit was intact.

Dilfer completed 2 of 6 passes for 13 yards and was sacked once. Dunn's 38-yard run led to a second-quarter field goal, and No. 3 quarterback Scott Milanovich used a 24-yard, fourth-down completion to John Davis to set up a third-quarter field goal that trimmed Washington's lead to 10-8.

Bears 20, Bills 17 OT
ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Jeff Jaeger kicked a 42-yard field goal with 6:09 remaining in overtime to give the Chicago Bears a 20-17 exhibition victory over the Buffalo Bills on Saturday.

The Bears moved 27 yards on 10 plays before Jaeger won the game. He sent the game into the extra period with a 27-yarder with 27 seconds left in the fourth quarter.

Rick Mirer struggled in his second straight game before the Bears got enough productivity from reserves to save him from embarrassment. Mirer completed 6-of-10 passes for 81 yards and one touchdown, but did little to establish himself as the No. 1 quarterback.

Chargers 20, 49ers 13
SAN DIEGO — There were some noticeable differences for the San Diego Chargers on Saturday night, from Stan Humphries lining up in the shotgun to a running back actually scoring a touchdown.

Kevin Gilbride's new offense made a successful debut with a 20-13 victory over the San Francisco 49ers in the exhibition opener for both teams. Gilbride and San Francisco's Steve Mariucci made their debuts as NFL head coaches.

San Diego rookie free agent Latorio Rachal made an impact on special teams, the biggest a 77-yard punt return for a touchdown early in the second quarter.

meetings at Suffolk Downs and Belmont Park, rediscovered the form that saw him prove the better of the two in last year's Travers.

Caldwell holds physicals
Physicals for Caldwell High School athletics will be conducted on Monday, Aug. 4 and Monday, Aug. 11 from 6 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. on both days at the new high school's gym. They will be conducted by Idaho Physical Therapy for $15 and are for all incoming 9th and 11th graders, or anyone new to the athletic programs.

Oilers 12-10.

The Saints, with new coach Mike Ditka and former Tennessee quarterback Heath Shuler, had more support than the Oilers thanks to a small pocket of fans dressed in gold T-shirts and waving a flag.

The Oilers, who won't be back again until the season opener Aug. 31, will need the next four weeks to work out the kinks found in the place they're calling home until their new stadium is finished in Nashville.

The line for extra points was painted at the 3 used for college instead of the 2 as used by the NFL and the referee's microphone worked infrequently. In the press box, statistic sheets didn't reflect the Oilers' new home and listed "HO" for Houston Oilers instead.

Reporters requiring help to figure out the action on the field didn't get it, since there was no announcer in the press box. Opening a window didn't make it any better since the public address announcer was barely audible.

The Oilers also didn't do much to whip up enthusiasm in their new state until late in the fourth quarter when the first team on the bench, Steve McNair, now the No. 1 quarterback after two seasons of learning, was 5-of-10 for 72 yards. He also fumbled the ball away midway through the second quarter, and veteran Ronnie Harmon fumbled on the Oilers' next drive.

Shuler, who didn't throw a pass while playing with the Washington Redskins last season, finished 9-of-12 for 104 yards. He also scored on a 1-yard drive on the Saints' opening 75-yard drive.

Vikings 24, Rams 6
MINNEAPOLIS — Brad Johnson just kept getting better and better and better for the Minnesota Vikings.

Johnson threw first-half touchdown passes of 24 yards to Chris Carter and 43 yards to Chris Walsh to lead the Vikings to a 24-6 victory over the St. Louis Rams on Saturday night.

Johnson, who had the third-best quarterback rating in the NFL last season after replacing Warren Moon at midseason, helped ruin Rams coach Dick Vermeil's return to the sidelines after a 15-year hiatus.

Giants 21, Ravens 20
BALTIMORE — Jim Fassel

will's Way, ridden by Jerry Bailey, came from just off the pace to score by a nose over Formal Gold in Saturday's $350,000 Whitney Handicap at Saratoga.

Formal Gold, who took the lead at the start and narrowly missed holding onto it at the end, was 6 1/2 lengths ahead of the favorite, Skip Away, who failed to pose a serious threat at any point.

Circle of Light, Edinor's Note and Pyramid Peak completed the order of finish.

Prejudice rears its ugly head in Cheyenne

Not important... but possibly of interest

I was attending a meeting of Western writers in Cheyenne, Wyo. One night, several attendees uncased an assortment of musical instruments and started a jam session in the hotel lobby.

The jammers knew their stuff. A college professor from Arkansas looked like Willie Nelson and sang like Waylon Jennings.

At least a couple of the participants had been studio musicians.

Armed with guitars, mandolins and fiddles, the musicians belted out several frontier ballads, some blue grass, rock-a-billy and hard-core New Orleans blues. The joint was jumping. The lobby area soon was filled with listeners.

Then the Accordion Lady showed up.

As I have noted previously, my partner in life was a champion accordionist. I enjoy an accordion when it is played in the proper setting.

Cheyenne wasn't the time or the place.

It was the college professor's turn to pick a song. He paused for a moment, trying to think of a good one.

"Let's play something everyone knows!" interrupted the Accordion Lady. She broke into "Red River Valley."

The violation of jamming protocol stunned the other participants. Several looked at each other and rolled their eyes.

But most politely joined in — although it's tough to do anything really creative playing backup to an accordion playing "Red River Valley."

When the song ended, a murmur ran through the audience. The other jammers started discussing what song to tackle next.

"Everybody sing!" yelled the accordion player. "Balder Ree!! Balder Rah, Balder Rah Hah Hah Hah Hah Hah!"

"Red River Valley" is a Western tune. But you don't have to be a Western writer to know no self-respecting cowboy would ride across the range singing "The Happy Wanderer."

By the time the song was over, a guitarist, the best mandolin player and a sizable portion of the crowd had wandered off to parts unknown.

The defections didn't faze the lady with the squeeze box. She jumped right into another sing-along — "Michael Row the Boat Ashore." Most of the rest of the audience and jammers discreetly paddled out of the lobby before Michael's sister got the sails trimmed.

I hung around for another couple of songs, trying to bring back the earlier magic by loudly suggesting the remaining jammers play "real music."

By the time I gave up, the group was down to the accordionist and three middle-aged women who were holding hands and singing "Puff, The Magic Dragon."

As I headed for my quarters, I passed one of the smaller hotel conference rooms. Although the door was closed, I thought I heard music. I peeked inside.

The musicians who had fled from the Accordion Lady were back in action.

Most of the members of the audience had found their way to the secret jam session, too.

The clandestine musical jamboogie was still going strong when I went to my room about midnight.

The Accordion Lady had disappeared from the lobby. And she didn't show up at any of the other jam sessions during the convention.

I sometimes feel a twinge of guilt for participating in the abandonment of the Accordion Lady.

Prejudice is a terrible thing. On the other hand, "The Happy Wanderer," played on just about any instrument, is a terrible thing, too.

Nobody said life is fair.

Learning how to look

With a little imagination, parents can introduce kids to art

By Cherron Myers
Idaho Press-Tribune

You don't know the difference between a Picasso and a Monet, and your kids would probably get bored inside an art museum, anyway, right?

Wrong.

Children are more receptive to art than adults think they are, says Andrea Potochick, curator of education at the Boise Art Museum.

Potochick says kids are natural when it comes to art appreciation because they have vivid imaginations. But people often stifle their feelings when they enter the plush interior of an art museum. They hesitate to discuss the artwork. They speak in hushed tones, or they refuse to speak at all. And some people become just each exhibit, rather than contemplate the individual features found in each piece.

"You're supposed to talk," Potochick says. "And sometimes people are afraid to say something, because they don't want to be wrong. Kids often are better because they're so uninhibited."

Kids' day

Boise Art Museum offers a kids' day every other month to help ease children into the art culture.

The event, which will be held from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Wednesday, offers a variety of activities for junior art enthusiasts. A scavenger hunt encourages kids to look for items in artwork around the museum, such as a dog, a girl and fish.

Children who visit the art museum during kids' day will learn how black-and-white photographs are hand-colored. Alice Braun, owner of Braun Studios in Nampa and Caldwell, will demonstrate the hand-coloring technique Wednesday and Thursday.

Photocopied pictures in black and white will be given to children during kids' day, and they will have a chance to hand-color the pictures.

Braun looks forward to seeing their versions of a photo that is more than 130 years old.

"It's really interesting to see how they do the same things," Braun says.

Braun discovered her son's artistic talent when he was a 5-year-old and started drawing horses, people and airplanes. Her grown son attended the American Academy of Art in Chicago and now owns a graphic art studio in Seattle.

Boise Art Museum Kids' Day

10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Wednesday, at the Boise Art Museum, 670 S. Julia Davis Drive, Boise. The event will be held in conjunction with "New Realities: Hand-Colored Photographs, 1839 to Present." Features a chalk drawing, scavenger hunt, self-portraits, hand-coloring and hand-painted photograph demonstration by Alice Braun, owner of Braun Studios in Nampa and Caldwell. Kids free; adults half price. For more information, call 345-8330. Braun also will conduct a demonstration during Thursday Thoughts on Art from 3 to 7 p.m. at the Boise Art Museum. Free admission all day: 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.; includes Free First Thursday. For more information, call 345-8330.

Learning together

Parents should discuss each object they observe at the art museum, Potochick says.

"Teaching from object to object, you don't really have to know anything about art history," Potochick says. "In the beginning, it's just you and the artwork. The art history can come later."

Parents should be ready to ask lots of questions during the viewing process.

"Ask them, 'What do you like best?' and 'Why do you like it?' This way, they have to formulate a whole idea," Potochick says.

A kids' gallery guide to the art museum is always available near the front of the building, and Potochick encourages parents to pick up the free guide before they wander through the museum. If you can't find the guide, ask someone at the information counter or in the museum store.

The gallery guide highlights current exhibits and asks the viewer questions about lines, colors and textures. One question reads, "What would this photograph sound like if you could hear it?" A suggested reading list contains books for adults and children. The books on the list can be found at the Boise Public Library, located across from the museum on Capitol Boulevard.

Potochick says parents and children should slow down and contemplate the exhibits. Instead of trying to conjure up the correct meaning behind each object, the family should search for a meaning of their own.

"It's a great activity for adults and children to do," Potochick says. "You're both just learning how to look."

Redecorating your kitchen countertops? Out with the old

Julie in Nampa took me up on sending a list of her planned home-improvement projects. That's quite a list, Julie!

One of the projects was to update the color and style of plastic laminate countertops in her kitchen.

Here's my advice: One of the reasons that you are now replacing your countertop is because back in 1978 when your home was built, the tops were selected for what home buyers wanted at the time. Your no-remains color was the "hot" thing. Now, as you know, it's "not-so-hot."

In selecting your new tops, you have to consider who you are making happy: you, or the next buyer of your home. If you plan on selling the house in four years, today's trendy, fashionable desired colors may be on the way out. It's a simple fact: When new becomes normal, people want something else new.

Plastic laminates like Wilsonart and Formica offer the greatest color variety. Over time, classics have developed, and for good reason. They do not come and go with time. They always look good. One of my favorites is plain old boring white. Another is a con-try blue shade. The stone and granite finishes are creeping up on my safe list also.

What would I avoid? Bright primary colors and wood grains. I am also a bit uncomfortable with pastels and the offshoot greens that are back in the "Cool Zone" right now. That is my opinion, though, and you are the one who has to live in the house and will be writing the check.

Please do not forget Dupont Corian and other solid surface materials. The durability is incredible and if you will be in the home a while, the extra cost is worth it. Even in a resale situation, you will probably get your money out of them as they enhance the value of the home — as long as they are properly chosen and installed.

When it comes time to lay it on the line and order your tops, do not provide the supplier with any measurements. Make them come to the kitchen and take them.

You can give them a rough idea in conversation, but I want you to be protected in case the tops do not fit when they arrive. By having them take the measurements, they are responsible for the accuracy and not you. I also would let them, as professionals, install the new tops. One minor slip-up and your "I'll-install-them-myself-and-save-big-$'s" theory is out the window.

Ceramic tile is a surfacing option that I feel comfortable recommending as a project for the somewhat-skilled do-it-yourselfer. There are classes you can attend, videos to check out, and supplier how-to sheets readily available. It's also a lot of fun.

The satisfaction of doing it yourself is a wonderful, confidence-building feeling. There are not a lot of tools to buy, most can be rented if need be, and you can move along at your own pace. You also can go right over the top of your existing laminate backs by putting down a layer of cementitious backer board with screws directly into the countertop base material. There are a few other tile tips to do that I do not have room here to write about, but your tile supplier can fill you in on them.

There is one other thing as far as tops go that I would avoid at all cost. Wood edging and backsplashes. In a kitchen, exposed wood collects dangerous bacteria from meats and juices, as well as dirt from hands and kitchen items and tools. It is hard to keep clean, and I have heard of some nasty splinters in children's hands and grown-ups hips and sides from nicks on the edging.

Good luck, Julie! Keep those cards and letters coming, folks!

PROSE CORNER

Seeing Idaho in the Centennial Year

By Earnest Dunlap, written in 1963

As we are native Idahoans, we decided that the best vacation this year would be a tour of historic and famous places in Idaho that we have never seen before.

And what could be more exciting for a Boy Scout than an explorer's trip. My parents and I have toured 31 counties of Idaho's 44 counties. These are all camping trips. We boys sleep outside in our sleeping bags on the ground, a lot of our cooking is done over a campfire. I have learned to set up and break camp in no time flat. I have learned what the essentials are for camping and how to protect myself at all times. We have been camping since I was 2 years old.

On this special trip we were all up early, had breakfast and left Nampa at 5:15 a.m., August 17th, 1963. One gets to see some beautiful sunrises by getting up early. We do not drive at night. We arrived at beautiful Payette Lake well before lunch, set up a quick camp, then spent the rest of the day swimming, hiking, etc. To bed early and up early before breakfast. Left for Northern Idaho. As you can see by the photos we took, we saw many historical spots.

We went over White Bird Hill. Breathing. Also Lewiston Hill. We toured the University of Moscow campus. Lewiston, as you know, was Idaho's first capital. We arrived at beautiful Coeur d'Alene Lake the afternoon of the second day. More swimming, fishing, and hiking. As I am a good swimmer, I can swim in deep water, but I never swim alone or without adults.

Our third day we saw the Caltada Mission, the oldest mission in Idaho, the mines at Kellogg, and the largest white pine sawmill in the world at Potlatch. We hiked in the beautiful St. Joe Forest (we saw spotted deer in the St. Joe Forest). And saw some of the most beautiful scenery in Idaho.

Lewiston Hill at dusk. At this point you can see Lewiston, Idaho and Clarkston, Wash.

We spent some time in Spalding Memorial Park. Very interesting. We saw writings of the Sheepherder Indians on rocks. Not at Spalding.

We all hated to leave, as camping is so carefree. The next three days were spent at Payette Lakes. We learned how to cook over a campfire, more swimming, and hiking. Also had time for a few games of miniature golf and some of us went horseback riding. We are rock hounds and collected small rocks all along our trip. Took many beautiful pictures.

The pictures do not do the scenery we saw justice. This was one of the best vacations I have had. We covered a thousand miles from the time we left Nampa. I think it would be nice if everyone could really see Idaho! Its prairies, forests, mountains, rivers, lakes, farmland, mines, etc. Camping and sports are my favorite hobbies.

Whispers

By Stephanie D. Alderman, Nampa

Whisper of the shadows, their moist darkness their vulnerability.

Whisper in the light,
don't disturb the quiet.

the inevitability.

Whisper of a love
a memory of truth
see fate's instability.

Whispers inside my heart.

their words unheard a meaning incoherent.

Whisper of a needing a love missing —
My soul, it whispers, of you.

Ducklings in a Backwash

By Keith Moore, Adrian, Ore.

Ducklings in a backwash
Say all that needs to be Proclaimed about the coming
Sick century —
Each innocent zig
A zag against mean man.

His monetary monoliths
And condominium crush —
The ducklings are fretting
I drive by slowly
And help hate for them

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Aug. 3, the 215th day of 1997. There are 150 days left in the year.

Today's birthdays: Broadway composer Richard Adler is 76. Author Leon Uris is 73. Singer Tony Bennett is 71. Actor Alex Cord is 66. Actor Martin Sheen is 57. Lifestyle guru Martha Stewart is 56. Singer Beverly Lee (The Shirelles) is 56. Movie director John Landis is 47. Actor Jay North ("Dennis the Menace") is 45. Rock singer James Hetfield (Metallica) is 34. Rock singer-musician Ed Roland (Collective Soul) is 34. Country musician Dean Sams (Lonestar) is 31.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 3, 1492, Christopher Columbus set sail from Palos, Spain, on a voyage that would take him to the present-day Americas.

In 1914, Germany declared war on France.

In 1923, Calvin Coolidge was sworn in as the 30th president of the United States, following the death of Warren G. Harding.

In 1936, the State Department urged Americans in Spain to leave because of that country's civil war.

In 1943, Gen. George S. Patton slapped a private at an army hospital in Sicily, accusing him of cowardice. Patton was later ordered by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower to apologize for this and a second, similar episode.

In 1948, Whittaker Chambers, a former Communist, publicly accused former State Department official Alger Hiss of having been part of a Communist underground, a charge Hiss denied.

In 1949, the National Basketball Association was formed.

In 1958, the nuclear-powered submarine Nautilus became the first vessel to cross the North Pole under way.

Domestic violence not adequately punished

Dear Ann Landers: It happened again, this time in Minneapolis. A man killed his wife after ignoring a restraining order. He kicked in the door, with their children in the home. They witnessed the entire scene. The abuse had been going on for a long time, and the wife was legally separated from the man after having spent many nights in a shelter for battered women.

How can judges let these guys go, time and time again, on the condition that they stay away from the women? They never do — they always return, more enraged than ever. Why is domestic abuse almost always considered only a misdemeanor? If the same assault occurred on the street or in the workplace, would it still be classified as a misdemeanor?

Why is this crime not considered a felony? Until the law views domestic violence as a serious crime, perpetrators will think it is their right to keep their wives or significant others in line by beating up on them.

The real issue here is power and control. Until society refuses to tolerate violence in the home and next door, abusers will continue to beat up on their victims and even kill them.

Perhaps we need a national forum, such as your column, to get a handle on this problem. Wife beating does not belong in the misdemeanor category. For many, it is a matter of life and death. Please, Ann, talk about this horrendous problem. It needs national exposure. — Alexandria, Minn.

Dear Alexandria: I have dealt with the subject of domestic violence in this space on a regular basis for many years, and I will continue to do so. Meanwhile, rest assured that I am in total agreement with you. Domestic violence should indeed be taken out of the misdemeanor category and labeled a felony.

Dear Ann Landers: Here's another one for your crazy-lawsuit file. As an apartment manager in a small community in Florida, I've had to evict people for non-payment of rent. I don't enjoy doing this, but it's part of my job, and the owner expects me to handle these evictions properly.

Not long ago, one of the tenants was behind in his rent. She told me her check bounced because she was suing the government for $1 million and claimed there was some sort of conspiracy against her. She insisted that she would not have to pay any additional or past-due rent because the government would be responsible for it. After two more months without any payment, we started eviction proceedings.

She then sued our complex. The lawsuit claimed we were conspiring with the federal government, local grocery stores and utility services to deny her basic living necessities. When the judge threw out her case, she named him as a co-conspirator in her lawsuit.

It's sad the courts are backlogged with cases that should never see the light of day. It gives our justice system a bad name. I think this woman needs medical help, and I hope she gets it soon. — Evictor

Dear Evictor: In a democratic country such as ours, not only is freedom of speech guaranteed, but anybody can sue anybody for anything. No matter how "goofy," there is a lawyer somewhere who will handle the case.

Gem of the Day (pardon the immodesty, but credit Ann Landers): Some people believe holding on and hanging in there are signs of great strength. However, there are times when it takes much more strength to know when to let go and then do it.

Ann Landers is a nationally syndicated columnist. You may send questions to her in care of the Idaho Press-Tribune, P.O. Box 9399, Nampa ID 83652.

ASTROGRAPH

Aug. 4

A game plan you'll engineer for yourself in the year-ahead might not be easy, but you'll know its real worth. Do not let the unaware dissuade you of its merits.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It might be necessary to champion your own cause today in order to be properly compensated for services rendered. Do not leave it to another's discretion.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You may have to make it clear to your youngsters today that you've laid down certain rules for their own good and they will be enforced.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Nothing will be gained today by trying to even-up an old score with someone who wronged you in the past. In fact, it could present new complications.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today you might be inclined to be unduly generous to the wrong people. Try not to ignore the deserving and cater to the manipulators.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) It is essential that you clarify your goals today, or you might waste time on objectives that will provide little satisfaction if achieved.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Associates might find you extremely difficult to please today. It could be due to your reluctance to lay all of your cards out on the table.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Play it very close to the vest today if circumstances force you to operate with limited resources. Do not go for broke trying to keep up with others.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A partnership deal could fizzle out today if you and your cohort's aims are not in perfect harmony. You must be of one mind and purpose.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Guard against inclinations today to delegate some responsibilities to individuals who can't be relied upon. They may leave you in the lurch.

Track small details now for budget

Our aims and goals create a dilemma for many of us.

Whether we are concerned with retirement, education or just general financial well-being, the question seems to be: "Where is the money going to come from?"

We find it hard to cover current bills — let alone put aside something for long-term goals.

Let's take a look at how we can cut expenditures.

Begin by analyzing where the money went. I find that most people really don't know.

Yes, they know how much the mortgage costs and maybe the exact amount of the car loan. However, most of us don't know exactly how much we spend on food, insurance, entertainment, etc.

If we are ever to manage our outgo we must first track that outgo for a period of time and find out exactly what it is spent on.

Having done that, we are in a better position to prepare a budget. The very act of tracking outgo for a month or two will at least make us aware of what we are spending our money on. That awareness alone can cause changes in habits.

A budget is normally set up for a one-year period and subdivided into 12 monthly segments.

The left-hand column is a list of each category of expenditure — food, rent, car insurance, savings and so forth.

A second column reflects the amount we plan to spend in each category.

A third column is filled in after the fact and will show the actual amount spent.

Column four shows the amount (plus or minus) by which actual and planned expenditures vary.

Unfortunately, it doesn't occur to most people to go through this mental balancing act.

The want is now — the goal may be 20 years away.

A budget is simply a tool to help us keep the need to weigh purchase decisions at the front of our minds. In other words, it makes the purchase of a 4-wheel-drive "toy" a decision as opposed to an exercise in instant gratification.

There are all sorts of preprinted budget forms and software available. Check with your insurance agent, accountant or a good software store. Do yourself a favor and use one!

Jury awards cop widow $50 million in derailment

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — A jury awarded $50 million in punitive damages to the widow of a police officer killed in a train derailment. She plans to donate the money to charity for safer rail travel.

Angelica Palank was seeking up to $500 million from CSX Transportation Inc. Her husband, Paul, was one of eight passengers who were killed when the Amtrak Silver Star slammed into a parked freight train in July 1991 in Camden, S.C.

She said the money would help set up two foundations, one to promote better rail inspections and the other to bolster child safety. She was awarded $6.1 million in compensatory damages in another trial in 1995. CSX appealed that verdict and lost in the line of fire

Don Fry, manager of Noodles Restaurants in Nampa and Boise, says firing employees is never fun, but sometimes is necessary.

Letting an employee go isn't easy, but some steps can ease the pain for both parties

By Abby Lee
Idaho Press-Tribune

Hiring the right person for the job is one of the most important decisions an employer can make. But when that "right person" turns out to be a less than a desirable employee, deciding to fire that worker can be one of the most difficult decisions an employer can face.

"Firing someone is the worst and hardest thing I have to do as a manager," Don Fry of Nampa said.

Fry, who has managed Noodles Restaurants in Boise and Nampa for more than 20 years, said he dislikes the termination task because "the employees who you're firing are mothers, fathers, people who are dependent on this income."

And that's why many employers have such a hard time dealing with the task of firing an employee.

Some managers dislike it so much they just ignore the issue or take a passive-aggressive approach, according to Gundars Kaupins, associate professor of management at Boise State University.

Kaupins, who also does management consulting, helped a company analyze job descriptions and organizational chart. In the discussions, he learned the managers had a particular employee they wanted to fire, but instead of doing so, they simply redesigned the individual's job to make it useless.

"It seemed reasonable to let the person go," Kaupins said. The straight-forward approach, no matter how difficult, is more efficient and also more fair to the employee, Kaupins said.

Fry agrees and admits his first obligation is to the success of the business.

"If someone simply is not committed to the job or able to fulfill the requirements of the position, making the decision to let them go is a necessary, although emotional, conclusion," he said.

A difficult process

But the decision does not come quickly, he said.

"We exhaust all avenues of training and supervising before someone is fired," Fry said. "And I have a lot of discussions with the employee to try to help them improve before I can decide they're not working out."

And when he comes to that conclusion, Fry said he tries to be empathetic with the employee and above all he separates the action from the individual.

"Being fired is such an emotional thing, and it really affects people's self-esteem, so I'm careful to let them know although they may not be right for this job, they're still a good person," Fry said.

A Caldwell woman knows the stigma and embarrassment that comes from being fired.

"I was young and not very responsible about showing up for work, but my boss yelled at me to just get out one day when I showed up late for work," she said.

Now a successful assistant manager for a local store, the woman is still embarrassed about the incident and has bad feelings toward her former boss about the way the situation was handled.

"I still cringe when I think about it, and I have to admit I've never listed that job on my applications because it's really still embarrassing for me," she said.

She said that if she had received better training, she may not have had to be fired.

Successful hiring and training is the key to avoiding having to fire someone, Kaupins said.

Fry said he tried to give his employees the best possible training, and the policy seems to have served him well. Just this week two of Fry's employees were recognized for 10 years of service at the restaurant, and several other have five to eight years of experience on the job.

Explaining job expectations clearly and providing the necessary training not only helps employees be successful, it also provides plenty of support for a manager when faced with the prospect of firing an employee.

"Employees need to know exactly what is expected of them and what will happen if they do not meet these expectations," Kaupins said. "If this is done, firing will never come as a surprise."

Do it the right way

Avoiding the surprise element is the key to successfully terminating employment, Kaupins said.

Although no guideline can cover every situation, Kaupins advises employers to use progressive disciplining.

Progressive discipline involves a series of steps including an oral warning, a written warning that is placed in the employee's permanent file, suspension (with or without pay for one to three days), and then finally terminating employment.

Although both employers and employees must deal with the emotions and dynamics firing brings, Kaupins advises managers to look at an unlikely source for help when deciding to fire someone.

"A hot electronic stove is the perfect example of effective discipline," Kaupins said.

He cites the following reasons for this claim:

- Immediate response: A hot stove provides immediate punishment when touched. A good manager provides immediate discipline when needed.

- Warning: A hot stove gives bright red to warn of danger. A good manager sets out clear expectations and warns employees when they need to improve.

- Impersonal: No matter who touches it, the person will get burned. A good manager will discipline any employee when necessary.

- Consistent: No matter when it's touched, a person gets burned. A good manager is consistent with policies and discipline.

By using these techniques, Kaupins suggests managers can ensure they are being fair and effective when firing.

And once the decision is made, stick to it, advises Leslie Muir, director of human resources at Columbia West Valley Medical Center in Caldwell.

Muir said the hospital is committed to helping its employees be successful in their jobs.

"Successful employees make a successful company, and we make it a priority to make sure our employees get the training and support needed to help them to succeed," she said.

And Muir said policy is to practice progressive discipline, so employees are aware there is a problem and get the additional training or warning they need to improve.

"By the time the decision to terminate someone's employment is made, the employee's manager and I have conducted extensive investigations and have had several discussions with the employee, so it's never a surprise for the employee," Muir said.

Among yourself with documentation is your best preparation for a successful firing.

Many employees respond with tears or anger when faced with being fired, but Muir said being able to review the employee's performance as well as all written warnings and incidents helps diffuse the situation.

But it may not make it any easier.

Fry remembers having to fire a 50-year-old who just wasn't working out as the company's bookkeeper.

"She cried and was upset because she had never been fired before," Fry said. "It was the right decision to let her go, but it was one of the hardest things I've ever done."

Ag director attends trade meeting

BOISE — Agricultural trade was the topic at the '97 Ag Accord meeting held in Canmore, Alberta, Canada, July 10 and 11. The Accord has been in operation since 1984, with Canada and the United States meeting each year. Once the North American Free Trade Agreement took effect in 1994, representatives from Mexico began attending as well. Attendees included Pat Takasugi, director of the Idaho State Department of Agriculture.

"By sitting and talking with my Canadian and Mexican counterparts, we have been able to constructively discuss several issues important to Idaho's ag industry," stated Takasugi. "Several of the issues included reducing unnecessary sanitary requirements and streamlining procedures in facilitating freer trade of feeder cattle between the U.S. and Canada; dealing with ongoing trade problems on a more timely basis; and working toward seed potato protocol between the U.S., Canada and Mexico."

Boeing to form board with takeover

By The Associated Press

SEATTLE — Executive appointments, a combined logo and a new board of directors were the only visible signs Friday of the Boeing Co. takeover of McDonnell Douglas Corp., the largest merger in aerospace history.

The $16.3 billion deal, boosted from an estimate of $14 billion when the deal was announced by rising stock prices and an increase in the number of Boeing shares, took effect at 12:01 a.m. Friday.

Not until Monday, though, do the two companies begin operating as one, with more than 225,000 employees in 27 states and estimated revenue of more than $48 billion this year.

That's when chairman Phillip M. Condit and president Harry C. Stonecipher, previously chairman of McDonnell Douglas, plan a speech and news conference at the National Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C., with live satellite feeds to about 145,000 workers at 40 locations nationwide.

Celebrations and other commemorative events for the combination of the world's largest civilian and military aircraft builders are planned at many of the same sites.

"It's a very quiet day here," Boeing spokeswoman Sherry Nebel said Friday. "We're all kind of holding our breath for Monday."

In the first executive shuffle under the merger, Walter J. Orlowski, vice president and general manager at Douglas Aircraft Co. under the McDonnell Douglas regime, was reassigned to Seattle as vice president of strategic and product planning for Boeing Commercial Airplane Group.
